Workers Riot In 'Paradise'

All is not well in the "workers' paradise." Machine guns, the frowning mouths of tank guns, police clubs, revolvers—all these have put down a sudden anti-Russian demonstration of workers in the East sector of Berlin—which city, set in the midst of the Soviet, is divided like a pie into four Allied slices—United States, British, French and Russian.

German workers there learned that the Marxist, Communist promise of a "workers' paradise" was a cruel lie. It has been a lesson learned at great sacrifice in the satellite countries and, by many, at least, in the USSR itself.

The trouble in the "workers' paradise" is not confined to East Berlin. It is also simmering beneath the surface in Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

The Soviet worker has been pushed harder and harder—with constantly increasing production goals. In East Berlin the production demands were raised and prices went up once more. The workers, allowed to march in a staged protest, went out of hand and for four hours a mob of workers, their long-pent-up emotions suddenly released, raged in a sort of hysteria in which they flung themselves at tanks and guns and were put down only when Soviet troops reinforced the police.

Prestige

This will be costly to the Kremlin.

All Communist parties obviously are restive and afraid. Stalin died. The new regime in the dark, gray buildings inside the Kremlin walls has not been able to pass along its policy to the parties in the satellite countries.

But all know there is a change. The electric feeling of it runs through the whole world. There is a belief, based on reading the Communist press, that Molotov and Beria are winning the struggle for power over Malenkov. More and more Molotov is in the papers, while Malenkov appears less and less.

As a result, there is fumbling by the satellite Communists, who are uncertain as to their own future.

They keep asking themselves, "What does it mean? What are they thinking there in Moscow? What does the change in Austria indicate? What's behind the new gesture of friendship to Tito? What about the new recognition of Greece? Shall I bet on Malenkov or Beria or Molotov?" All these questions run through the minds of Communist bureaucrats. They are unhappy.

And the satellites have long been restive.

When we add it up we know a considerable amount about the Russian enigma.

We know that Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria—which were grain-surplus states—have been hungry because the Soviets took their foodstuffs. This included, in Hungary, the seed. New and better seed were promised; but not forthcoming. The result is that Hungary has a crop crisis greater than the others.

Some of the grain was going to China to feed the army in Korea.

The Lie

All the while, the pressure has been on the workers. The middle class has been abolished. Those who had pensions have lost them. The workers were extolled and honored. But, their work requirements went up and up, and the money would buy less and less.

The Communists are failing to prove that they have the answers to mankind's problem of poverty and want. Their promise of a paradise if the Marxist formula is followed is becoming recognized as a great, cruel hoax by more and more who have been forced into one of the Communist "paradises."

East Berlin will cause a further loss of face.

The Korean truce is almost sure to be followed by a Soviet move to try and get other nations out of Germany on a promise to quit the East herself—a trap into which we can't afford to fall.

But note this—it is the Communist idea which is proving itself false.

Can't Talk As Justice, Clark Says

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark declined today to appear before House investigators on grounds that men on the high bench should avoid "the strife of public affairs and partisan politics."

He gave the reason in a letter to Chairman Kenneth B. Keating (Rep., N. Y.) of a House judiciary subcommittee which invited Clark to explain his handling of seven cases as attorney general from 1945 to 1949.

Keating said he will ask the full judiciary committee at its regular meeting tomorrow "for a determination whether or not to insist upon his appearance." That raised the possibility that he will ask the committee to approve a subpoena for Clark.

Clark told Keating the invitation involved "a high principle of great importance, the preservation of the independence of the three branches of government."

Keating said in a formal statement that "no question of separation of powers is involved."

"The matters upon which the committee desires to interrogate Justice Clark have no relation whatever to his judicial duties," he said.

Clark said it was his "personal inclination to appear before the subcommittee" but that he would have to forego it because of his desire to maintain the "complete independence" of the courts.

However, he gave the subcommittee a point-by-point comment on each of the seven cases about which it wanted to question him, saying it might be helpful in clearing up its record.

PSC Calls on Transit Co. To Give Detailed Report of Financial Status

The Georgia Public Service Commission has asked for what amounts to an almost complete audit of the financial affairs of the Atlanta Transit Company, which is seeking another fare increase.

This request for what the commission termed "additional information" Wednesday coincided with action by a special Senate committee to bring about an expert survey of Atlanta's transit service.

The PSC asked the company for 17 specific records, including listings of cash and other assets, investments, earned and capital surplus, debts, current liabilities, income statements, operating expenses and revenues, taxes, wages paid, passengers hauled, number of operators employed, wage increases, new buses purchased, reserves, depreciation costs, and further information on the sale and lease back of equipment.

In its letter to the company, the commission recognized the possibility that the company might not be able to get up all the requested information in time for the next hearing, July 2, on the proposed fare increase.

Meanwhile, the Senate study committee approved a contract with Simpson and Curtin, Philadelphia transportation engineers, for a survey of Atlanta's transit system and needs.

Capital Sees Rhee Move As 'Torpedo'

PW Release Jars Peace Optimism

By W. H. LAWRENCE
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, June 17—Washington's mood of optimism over a Korean armistice was abruptly, but perhaps only temporarily, shaken tonight with reports that the South Koreans had allowed anti-Communist North Korean prisoners of war to go free.

Only meager official reports had been received later tonight at the White House and State department and official comment was withheld. However, there was no mistaking the seriousness with which officials took the news that the prisoners, who under truce terms would have been turned over to a five-nation repatriation commission, were roaming in South Korea.

DESPERATE MOVE

The South Korean move was generally viewed as a desperate effort by the Rhee government to torpedo negotiations on the virtual eve of a truce signing and force continuation of the fighting.

Earlier, a well-informed source here expressed belief an armistice might be signed within the next 48 to 72 hours.

While conceding the seriousness of the prisoner-release situation, some high officials expressed belief that the sudden move would not necessarily block or hold up for long a truce. It was said the UN command already had undertaken measures to recapture the prisoners and some were reported back in custody.

These officials also felt the Chinese Communist and North Korean regimes would recognize the move as an inevitable South Korean effort to block an armistice and thus might be inclined to judge the situation on that basis.

ASSISTANCE PACT

Earlier expression of belief that the armistice might come in the next few days came after President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, in separate 50-minute conferences with Paik Too Chin, South Korean premier, gave renewed assurances that this country would make a binding mutual assistance pact with South Korea after a cease-fire agreement is signed.

To the South Korean proposal for such a pact before the armistice is signed, the American government replied, in effect, that there was too little time remaining for drafting and signing such an agreement.

Officials here were cautious about hazarding a guess upon the exact timing of a final armistice agreement, but they expressed belief it would come within the next two or three days.

SOVIET TANKS CLEAR EAST BERLIN STREET AS ANTI-REDS DEMONSTRATE
Russian Troops, Backed by Armored Vehicles, Quell Revolt and Establish Martial Law

Red Tank Division Smashes Riots, Killing 16 E. Berliners, Felling 119

By DAN DE LUCE

BERLIN, June 18 (AP)—A steel-shod Russian armored division smashed bloody anti-Communist strike riots in East Berlin yesterday, killing and wounding many East Germans.

Then the Soviets poured in reinforcements overnight to clamp down with an iron rule today and seal off their occupation sector.

LOSSES HIGH

The reported casualties were 16 known dead and 119 wounded. There may be many more.

Dietrich Gros, president of the West Berlin Red Cross, said the casualty figures were based only on the dead and wounded brought to West Berlin and that the toll might run much higher. More than 200 persons were believed wounded.

Unarmed Germans numbering at least 50,000 battled all day yesterday with a Soviet armored regiment and 10,000 Communist police before the armored division reached the Eastern sector from Russian zonal bases and hammered the demonstrators into submission.

In Moscow, the first Soviet comment on the East Berlin riots appeared today when Pravda described the outbreak in a headline reading: "The Failure of the Adventure of Foreign Hirelings in Berlin."

Soviet martial law was backed up with the largest reinforcements of tanks, artillery and infantry ever used to subdue a European city short of war.

The new Soviet force—approximately 10,000 troops with 200 heavy tanks—was rushed up as the anti-Communist strike paralyzed East Berlin.

CRISIS GROWS

The Red East German government of Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl appeared helpless in the continuing crisis.

The general strike spread to other Soviet zone cities. State railway workers walked out in sympathy with East Berliners and crippled zonal communications.

Despite the Soviet martial law decree, issued at 1 p. m., violent

Greeks Repulse Chinese Assault In 4-Hour Fight

TOKYO, Thursday, June 18 (AP)—Greek troops knocked back a two-battalion Communist assault on the Korean central front today in a savage four-hour battle which flared up despite the possibility of an armistice agreement.

Chinese Communist troops attacked outpost Harry shortly after midnight, hitting the Greek defenders twice in a bloody hand-to-hand battle. The Chinese began retreating at 2:50 a. m.

To the east of outpost Harry, South Korean and Chinese troops fought bitterly for a hill which commands the eastern end of the 15-mile breach in the allied defense line.

The western front was quiet again.

Airline officials said the plane was enroute to Buenos Aires from London. It crashed on an approach run toward the Sao Paulo airport.

Ike Agrees: 'Burn' Red Propaganda

By ED CREAGH

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—President Eisenhower said today that so far as he is concerned the State Department can go ahead and burn any books which openly propagandize for the Communist way of life.

In a news conference statement hailed as "commendable" by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.), Eisenhower said the "no book burning" stand he took at Dartmouth College last Sunday does not apply to books in which Communists openly appeal for people to join them.

The President said, too, referring to the information libraries this country maintains overseas, that he's against the use of government funds to spread Communist teachings—adding that, in general, he doesn't think such libraries should have Communist works on their shelves.

It would be the acme of silliness, Eisenhower declared, for the United States to be a party to its own self-destruction.

The book-burning question, discussed by the President at length and with some heat, came up after Eisenhower made public a proposed new order which he said was

Don't Hunt 'Escapees,' ROKs Warn

Threaten All Who Interfere

By S. K. LEE

PUSAN, June 18 (AP)—South Korean President Syngman Rhee revolted against United Nations authority today and released more than 25,000 anti-Communist North Korean war prisoners in a move to block the signing of an armistice agreement.

"We have been unjustly holding these people too long," Rhee declared. "In order to avoid the grave consequences which might result I have ordered on my own responsibility the release of the anti-Communist Korean war prisoners on this day, June 18, 1953."

Rhee's drastic action threatened to wreck the armistice which was expected to be signed this week.

STUNS CLARK

Gen. Mark W. Clark's Tokyo headquarters was shocked by Rhee's action. It was not known immediately what measures would be taken to recapture the prisoners, who disappeared into the countryside, or what explanation would be made to the Communists at Panmunjom.

Without consulting UN officials, Rhee simply ordered South Korean guards to allow the prisoners to escape, and they swarmed over the barbed wire barricades to freedom, leaving only about 20,000 anti-Communist Koreans in UN hands.

Thirty prisoners were injured in the escape, and one report said several were killed. Some 300 of the prisoners were recaptured shortly after they were released at 5 a. m.

WONT EXPAND

Rhee said he took the bold action for reasons he termed "too obvious to explain," and he did not explain them, except to say the release was ordered to prevent "grave consequences."

Allied officials first said the escape was a "co-ordinated mass breakout" and that tear gas was used in an attempt to halt the fleeing prisoners. But Rhee announced later that he personally had ordered the prisoners released through Lt. Gen. Won Yong

Ike Urges Easing Bans on Information

Would Erase Truman Order
Setting Up Restricted Category

By PAUL P. KENNEDY

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, June 17—President Eisenhower made public today a proposed new security information program that would rescind the highly controversial order issued by President Truman in 1951 and would, according to President Eisenhower, "open the door for citizens to obtain more information about their government."

In announcing the proposed order at his weekly news conference this morning, Mr. Eisenhower adopted the unusual procedure of submitting it to government agencies and to the public for discussion before acting finally upon it.

The new program would differ from the existing security information program in these important respects:

It eliminates the present classification category "restricted" which has been the target of most criticism thus far in the Truman order.

It eliminates the authority to organize classifications within 29 agencies and in 16 others it authorizes only the head of the agency to originate classifications. This does not affect such agencies as the Defense Department and Atomic Energy Commission but it calls for strict supervision of classification in these agencies.

The new order leaves only three classification categories and it defines these three whereas, it has been complained, the four categories in the present order are so loosely described they allow extensive and serious misinterpretation.

The "restricted" classification category is the lowest of the four in the present program. The other three, which would remain in force in the proposed order are: top secret, secret and confidential.

Criticism of the restricted classification has been based largely on the complaint that officials could arbitrarily place the stamp on material with little or no security value.

It is not stated in the proposed order whether present restricted material automatically would be declassified should the order be put in effect. One government source said it was likely, however, that material in this category would be subject to the review procedures specified in the new order before its status was changed.

Baruch Urges Big Three To Insist On Strength at Bermuda Parley

PHILADELPHIA, June 17—(UP)—Bernard Baruch tonight urged the Big Three to act at the coming Bermuda conference to resist a letdown in their defenses and hold their strength together until peace is certain.

The "Elder Statesman" and adviser to presidents said the West must look to President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill to stand firm against pressures for tax reductions and arms cuts that will be swelled by a truce in Korea.

"Will they lead us down the path which promises immediate ease but is really that of scuttling and run, even as after the close of World War II?" he asked. "Or will they lead us down the seemingly rougher but safer road of holding our strength together until peace is made sure?"

100TH ANNIVERSARY

Baruch, speaking at the 100th anniversary dinner of the Junior Order, United American Mechanics, also made these points:

1. He would not shut out the possibility of negotiating with Russia but the United States should find out in advance what concessions it would have to make and where it would have to hold firm.

2. The European army has been bogged down by a "tragic cycle of weakness begot by weakness." "Slippages" and "stretchouts" are sounding the death knell of the NATO army, which five years after it was planned still has not become a reality.

WILL NEED FORCE

3. Even if there is a settlement with Russia, the West will need military forces of considerable size, particularly in Europe. This will be especially essential as long as Germany is divided.

4. NATO members must stop "bargaining and haggling" and set hard and fast goals of performance to be held "without stretchouts or excuses."

5. The United States has set

Pentagon Blamed for 'Poor Training' Of Army and Air Force Reserves

By AUSTIN STEVENS

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, June 17—A House armed services subcommittee was told today that the reserve forces of the Army and Air Force were poorly trained and equipped, mostly because of ineffective Pentagon policies, and that the Navy's program also needed reform.

A detailed accusation of reserve practices was presented to the subcommittee by Col. Charles M. Boyer, executive director of the Reserve Officers Association. His presentation was based on a nationwide survey taken among reservists of all three armed services and the Marine Corps.

The armed services subcommittee, headed by Leroy Johnson (Rep., Calif.) opened its inquiry into reserve affairs after receiving numerous complaints from reservists that they were wasting time and government money through their reserve activities and detailing the faults in their particular programs.

COLLED INCAPABLE

Col. Boyer opened his testimony with this statement:

"From the standpoint of having a reserve trained and capable of being ordered to duty to neutralize with success the effect of a sudden attack, I can state definitely that we do not have such a reserve at this time."

Colonel Boyer, the only witness, called today, told the committee that the comment and criticism he had received from reservists fell into two categories—that which could be corrected by administrative action if the service so wished and that which would require congressional action.

In the second category he listed the need for legislation to provide the reserve forces with a "procurement system" which would assure reserve units of a sufficient number of enlisted men. Some Army reserve units, especially some designated as divisions, are faced with reorganization because they are failing to get a required number of members.

TRANSFER DRAFTS

Boyer also endorsed a plan, for which legislative authority already exists, whereby the Secretary of Defense would transfer to units of the reserve, upon completion of their basic training, a certain percentage of young draftees.

Boyer told the committee the reserve forces policy board of the Defense department still had "under study" his proposal to create additional posts in the Pentagon to supervise reserve affairs.

The colonel listed these main charges against the Army reserve system, based on his "grass roots" survey: Weak type of training and too rudimentary, poorly assigned instructors, insufficient equipment and printed material, need for stabilizing units, lack of an equitable promotion system and lack of attention to morale.

The Air Force criticisms followed the same pattern, and while the reserve official said naval and Marine Corps reservists, generally were satisfied with their program, he told the committee of possible administrative reforms.

Ike Calls TVA Example Of 'Creeping Socialism'

Sees Government and Industry Partners in Power Projects

By ANTHONY LEVIERO

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, June 17—President Eisenhower cited Wednesday the Tennessee Valley Authority, vast water control and power project in the Tennessee valley, as an example of what he meant by "creeping socialism."

He said that in effect the Federal Government subsidized the valley region by its monopoly of the power produced by TVA. Then TVA requested additional federal money in order to expand because industries from New England and other regions wished to move there to get the cheaper power rates.

The President called for a re-evaluation of what he called this socialistic theory whereby taxes from all the country were used to subsidize a particular region, which then sought to draw business from other areas.

WON'T DESTROY TVA

Eisenhower declared he had said a thousand times he had no intention of destroying TVA but was seeking a middle-of-the-road course that would eliminate the powerful, central role of the Federal Government in great projects. Instead, the government would be a partner with local and state governments and private industry.

The questioning was pegged on an off-the-cuff talk the President had made to county Republican leaders in Custer State Park, South Dakota, last Thursday night. He warned them to "work like dogs" if the Republican Party was to survive and turn aside the "creeping socialism" of two decades.

Eisenhower touched on two other domestic issues involving his middle-of-the-road philosophy. He was asked how this philosophy would affect social security legislation, and whether he favored the sale of government surplus butter at 10 cents a pound.

CITES ADAM SMITH

In replying on social security, the President referred to Adam Smith, the Scottish economist, exponent of the laissez faire philosophy, or the free play of economic forces without governmental interference.

A strict application of Adam Smith, said the President, would mean the people would have to take care of themselves out of the money they saved for that purpose during their active lives.

But in the age of mass production, he continued, conditions were created that did not make this possible for everybody and therefore the working population had to take care of all the population.

ABOUT BUTTER

But there were many ways of implementing this idea of social security, he continued, and he reiterated his well-known position that local and state governments should become partners with the Federal Government in operating the system.

The question on butter referred to a report that some Agriculture department officials favored the sale of some of the vast surplus at 10 cents a pound. But this cheap butter was to be tied into the sale of a pound of butter at the prevailing price.

Seamen Strike for Pay Raise; Tie Up All U. S. Ships in Port

NEW YORK, June 17—American ships due to embark stood idle at their piers in Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports today as seamen seeking higher pay refused to sail without a contract.

Incoming ships were due to be tied up on arrival, until as many as 750 vessels and 40,000 crewmen may be involved unless there is an early settlement.

Foreign vessels and those with strictly military cargoes were not involved.

Joseph Curran, president of the CIO National Maritime Union, described the situation this way: "Nothing, but nothing, is moving, and nothing will move until a contract is signed."

No new negotiating sessions between the union and shipping operators have been scheduled.

The old contract expired at midnight Monday as negotiations broke down over a union proposal

Kremlin Scores Lithuanian Regime

LONDON, June 17—The Kremlin has sternly rebuked the top Red leaders in Lithuania and ordered drastic shakeups in the party and government in that captive Baltic state, Moscow radio said tonight.

The broadcast said the Central Committee of the Lithuanian Communist party has decided to correct "serious shortcomings in the political work and control of the state and cultural upbuilding in the Lithuanian S. S. R."

A plenary meeting of the committee several days ago, the radio said, admitted distortions of the Lenin-Stalin national policy "particularly in insufficient training and promotion of Lithuanian national cadres aiding the party and economic work."

The three Baltic states—Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia—were absorbed into the Soviet Union in 1940 and little has been heard from them except through exiled Balts who campaign in the Western world for a return of their homelands' independence.

The Lithuanian policy changes appeared to parallel last week's events in the key Soviet Ukraine, when the No. 1 Communist there, L. G. Melnikov, was toppled from his post as first secretary of the provincial party.

Melnikov and the party as a whole were criticized for what appeared to be overly eager Russification of the Western Ukraine—formerly Eastern Poland. The action in the Ukraine was interpreted ed by some experts on Russia as an indication that the government of Soviet Premier Georgi Malenkov had decided to follow a less harsh line than Stalin did with the Soviet minorities.

Riots in Berlin Show Red Unrest

The East Berlin riots provide a clue to the stepped-up Russian peace offensive and lend credence to the idea that Malenkov would, indeed, like to make a few settlements with the West. This latent unrest that expressed itself in almost open revolt in East Germany is not confined to East Berlin. It exists in every satellite country in Eastern Europe.

During the past two weeks we have witnessed some dramatic events that are traceable to this unrest. We have seen the partial lifting of the Iron Curtain in Austria, strikes and riots in Czechoslovakia, an apparent reversal of policy in East Germany that still did not prevent the Berlin demonstration.

It remains to be seen whether the riots will have any real effect or whether they will result in wholesale slaughter, of the recalcitrant people. However, they point to the fact that all is not well behind the Iron Curtain and that the Russians are hard put to keep down the slumbering revolt that needs only a trigger.

The events provide another great challenge to the United States and the free world. They would indicate a growing success of our policy of encouragement to enslaved peoples—a policy that should be stepped up to take maximum advantage of the existing situation. It seems a good opportunity to give the Reds further doses of their own medicine.

We may be witnessing a disintegration of the cold war front, both in internal and international politics as a result of the stresses and strains inside Russia. Countries and parties are seemingly trying to revert to their traditional and accustomed policies. How it turns out will depend upon Western statesmanship and the not inconsiderable part that must be played by our State department—if it can disengage itself from its current pastime of book burnings and other McCarthy-dictated activities.

The Soviet "peace offensive" seems, indeed, to be one of the Kremlin's "strategic retreats" in the face of growing success of Allied policies and stupendous internal problems as well. The struggle brought about by Stalin's death is far from over. His absolute power carried the seeds of the present troubles within itself.

Georgia Leads East In Timber Products

Georgia still holds its lead as the leading producer of lumber in the eastern half of the United States. In the sale of all forest products, it is among the top three in the nation.

In 1951 a total of 2,177,193,000 board feet of lumber was produced in the state, with the nearest rival, North Carolina, producing only 2,022,050,000. Approximately two-thirds of the total area of Georgia is in woodlands. They are potentially our greatest resource and our most promising source of revenue.

We have come a long way in our attitude toward our woodlands. Formerly we considered them "woods to burn" but in the last quarter century we have come to realize that they are too valuable to be squandered. We are now cultivating woodlands on a crop basis.

There is no reason to suppose that we will not continue to develop our forest resources, with a program of conservation and replanting to keep an undiminished supply of raw materials for lumber, pulp, and to furnish the rapidly growing synthetic industry with its needs.

Yes, there is gold in Georgia forests. They must be protected and cultivated as any other resource if they are to continue to yield the wealth inherent in them.

Censorship Is Wrong Even If Disguised

We have the highest respect for the good intentions of the Rev. James L. Wesley, chairman of the Georgia Literature Commission, as well as for the other members of his commission. We are as opposed to lewdness in literature as is the commission or anybody else. We are just as definitely opposed, however, to the idea of any group of three people telling the rest of the population what it can read.

Censorship, real or implied, is not the American way. Censorship by government authority is a direct challenge to freedom of thought, of speech and of the press. In his advice to Dartmouth graduates Sunday, President Eisenhower summed it up very neatly: "Don't join the book burners. Don't feel you are going to conceal thoughts by destroying any evidence that they ever existed. Don't be afraid to go to the library and read every book, so long as that document does not offend our own ideas of decency. That should be the only censorship."

Evil cannot be defeated by hiding it. Lewdness becomes more attractive by being labeled as such.

We have courts and solicitors general in every county in Georgia. We also have laws against sale of lewd and salacious literature. Any citizen can bring charges against a bookseller in the courts. They can be considered by due process of law, by grand juries and traverse juries and judges. Why, then, do we need this board that the American Book Publishers Council charges is an "irregular and extrajudicial court"?

The only effective censorship, as President Eisenhower says, must be that dictated by our own personal sense of decency and morality. If we dislike the quality, we do not have to read any book. If our tastes are such that we do, then our educational and religious training have their jobs cut out for them.

But there is no place for book burners and censors in a free America.

Who Would Like An Atomic Tornado?

Senator Langer (Rep., S. D.) has introduced a bill to outlaw atomic explosions in the United States. Presumably he has been impressed with the rash of rumors that the more than usual number of tornadoes that have swept the nation recently were caused by atomic explosions.

If we believed they caused tornadoes, we might favor using some other place for atomic tests, too. However, we cannot think where that might be. If they cause tornadoes here, surely they would cause them elsewhere. Any of our possessions would probably object to our using them as bases for tests. Our Allies might not like the idea of our wishing the tornadoes off on them, either.

That, of course, leaves Russia and the Iron Curtain countries. There are those among us who favor testing them in large quantities there. We doubt, however, if permission would be granted. If we went ahead anyway, they might in turn decide to test theirs on New York or some other such target.

Seriously, though, scientists agree that the atomic explosions have nothing to do with the tornadoes. Jerome Namias, chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau's extended forecast division in Washington, says: "Even if there were 500 atomic bomb explosions every minute, they wouldn't affect weather conditions one iota."

There have been, on average of 149 tornadoes per year in this country since 1916 with an average of 227 dead and property damage of $13,000,000 annually. Some years have been worse than others. In 1884 they surged across the Southern states with a toll of 700 lives—long before we knew there was an atom.

We have learned a lot about atomic energy through these tests in Nevada, but strangely enough they have produced no strange weather in those desert regions. They are still desert.

However, if it makes Senator Langer any happier or if it gets him any votes, by all means let Congress consider his bill.

Let the Congress investigate, too, if it makes them or the people feel any better. Sooner or later some Republican and/or Democrat will blame it on Truman or Hoover or on Red spies. And make just as much sense.

White House Pilot Finds Going Rough

The May issue of Planes reveals that Dwight D. Eisenhower is the first President ever to hold a pilot's license. He earned the permit in 1939 when he was a lieutenant-colonel on MacArthur's staff.

Now the question is: Does Congress keep him up in the air give him credit for flying time?

One Fact Not Always Indicative of Another

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder, editorializing in the Market Bulletin, says: "No Christian can support the United Nations organization because it is a godless creation." We know of no organization, other than the church, which seeks higher aims than the United Nations organization. The office of Commissioner of Agriculture may or may not have been created by God, but this doesn't mean necessarily that the steward of this office is not a Christian.

E. German Riots Liberation Tipoff?

WASHINGTON—The most important news in the world today is not the Rosenberg case or the "book burning" controversy or even the Red offensive in Korea. It is the fact that Germans inside Soviet jurisdiction have demonstrated so vigorously that the Communists had to turn machine guns and tanks against them.

For this may be the beginning of the much-discussed "liberation" movement through which alone there can be an overthrow of totalitarianism and the attainment of a peace without tension.

The riots that have been reported, not only from East Germany's zone under Soviet rule, but from Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia and other points behind the Iron Curtain, are significant of a deep unrest which at any moment can become the revolution that must take place in Soviet Russia itself before there can be safety for the democracies of the world.

The latest disturbances may be quelled by force, but they will have left their imprint. The fact that thousands have stood up to the machine guns is indicative of the mood of defiance of millions of others. It will be said that the Soviet armies can always put down such rebellious movements. But it may be asked what happens when the troops in the Soviet army begin to be rebellious themselves?

The mutiny at Kiel in 1918 was a small affair in itself, but it touched off the revolution that caused the Kaiser to flee from Germany to Holland. The little revolution in 1917 which had overthrown the Russian czar could not have become nationwide so quickly without the support of the rank and file of the Russian army itself.

When last summer, during the presidential campaign, General Eisenhower proclaimed his interest in "liberation" of oppressed peoples, he was promptly assailed by large sections of the British and European press and by political opponents at home, including Secretary Acheson, as favoring American intervention by force of arms behind the Iron Curtain.

John Foster Dulles, who was looked upon at the time as likely to be secretary of state, clarified the point in a speech by insisting that the United States was not seeking to start any wars but merely was eager to lend moral support to any liberation movements that might be begun.

Tyranny begets enemies, active and passive, and the more innocent persons are shot down by machine guns, the more the seeds of a greater revolt are sown. Big developments seem to be on the horizon in Europe—and the peace that the world years for may not be as far away as it has seemed. The Soviet rulers have been bluffing the UN in the Far East and in Europe. Maybe the Allies will see the true Soviet weakness now.

Mrs. Luce Said What Had To Be

ROME—"We stuck her out there in front," the man from the American Embassy said. "What she said had to be said. It wasn't easy to say, but nobody could say it as well as she could. It wasn't her decision alone, though. It was the decision of the entire embassy, and it was a calculated and necessary risk."

He was talking about the background of Rome's hottest conversational piece: Ambassador Luce's speech at Milan just before the Italian elections. Communists and neo-Fascist groups leaped on it shrilly, and most observers believe they attracted votes away from the pro-American De Gasperi coalition because of it.

Concluding a speech in which she told of America's genuine interest in Italy's future, Mrs. Luce said, deep in the leftish manufacturing city:

"My President and my people desire for Italy what most Italians desire for Italy—a stable democratic government, a dynamic democracy able to advance her wellbeing and safeguard her freedoms. . . .

"In Italy's thrilling forward progress along the ancient highway of her natural greatness, she can count confidently on America's intimate and warm co-operation. We should—we Americans—be very sad to see that forward march checked or diverted."

"But if—and I am required in all honesty to say this . . . but if—though it cannot happen—the Italian people should fall unhappy victim to the wiles of totalitarianism, totalitarianism of the right or the left, there would follow—logically and tragically—grave consequences for this intimate and warm co-operation we now enjoy."

Communists promptly cried Americans were dictating to Italians how to vote. The Mussolini (or a reasonable facsimile) lovers whooped up nationalist feeling. The monarchists, usually more nostalgic than virile, said anti-American things.

Yet it had to be said. "The Communists poured twice as much money into the election than did the combined parties of the center," the man from the embassy said. "From every report we received we were convinced they had succeeded in planting in the minds of many voters the fiction that America actually was only paying lip-service to the De Gasperi government; that what we really were backing was a new form of Fascism."

Mrs. Luce is not among those who feel we have gotten a poor return on our tremendous investment in Italy. Along with other Americans she would have wished for a more bountifully backed De Gasperi.

"But we can't say the money we've put in here has gone down the drain," she told me. "Our friends won the election. The Communists once again have failed to seize Italy, despite a tremendous try. We have beaten them, and Italy remains free."

Floridian Sees Great Disadvantage In Federal Control of Power Supply

Vero Beach, Fla.—Of particular interest to those who have followed the conflict between government and private interests over construction of power facilities at Roanoke Rapids in North Carolina is the growing belief federal control of atomic energy hangs like a sword of Damocles over the fate of private utilities.

It is reasoned continuation of federal monopoly of atomic energy would result in ultimate control over business and industry through control or ownership of power production. Such a denouement may not be as remote a possibility as some think for the opinion is widely held that government ownership of utilities is in the public interest.

Whether or not that fallacy can be maintained will depend on how well it is established that government ownership conflicts with public interest. In the last 20 years federal power zealots secured for government a 25 per cent ownership in the production of electricity and employed propaganda to enlist support for this penetration into private enterprise. It is time the coin was turned over to let the public see the other side.

Government ownership of utilities means separation from the nation's tax base of installations valued in the billions. All taxpayers must bear a greater burden to compensate for loss in revenue resulting from tax-exempt government ownership.

Phenomenal growth of public insurance holdings in recent years has already posed a critical investment problem for the underwriters. Should continued growth aggravate this problem segregation of government utility holdings will loom as an unwarranted handicap to investment of insurance funds.

More Than Just Good Fish Story

His words still ring in my ears. I thought he had many reasons for considering himself particularly fortunate. He had an attractive and understanding wife, two handsome sons, a reliable business position, a home free from debt and even a summer home he'd received from his father's estate.

But he said rather bluntly, "Some people say they are tired to death, but I'm tired of life." I asked him why he felt that way. He said he didn't exactly know and that was why he was so restless. He added, "But something has got to shake me free from this feeling, for life no longer holds promise and there is no thrill left."

I wasn't worried that he would pack up and abandon his family or that he would jump from his office window. He wasn't that kind of a person. He had a profound sense of responsibility.

But I could see that life for him had lost its glow and that his own personal misery would soon be reflected in the lives of his family and of his business associates. His negative feeling would make his companionship unattractive. People would begin to avoid him. Soon he would be not only disheartened but isolated.

Furthermore, his problem wasn't an uncommon one. Many people find no promise and feel no thrill in living. It isn't a matter of ulcers or a poor diet or lack of sleep. It is a matter of life's goal and life's meaning. When no goal in life is discernible and no meaning clear, each of us will become "tired of life."

When you got up this morning, did you get up merely to get up, or did you get up to live?

What is an antidote for discouragement and despair? How can we free ourselves from our gloomy moods? How can we recapture life's thrill and life's glow?

One day by the lake of Genesaret Christ met a group of discouraged fishermen. All night long they had labored, but they had only empty nets. These men were not fishing for pleasure; fishing was their livelihood. The welfare of their wives and children was at stake.

Christ understood their feeling and bade them, "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught." Simon was amazed to hear these words: "Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net." You remember that, according to Luke 5, a great multitude of fish were taken.

The miracle is more than a good fish story; it is an account of the miraculous transformation of human life. Christ bade the men to launch out for more than fish. They went out to get a new perspective of life, a new look at themselves and a new thrill in living.

Indeed These Are Trion Times

The name's to blame for the game, if you want to put it that way. It started in South Dakota. Bored journalism students took names of towns in their state and turned them into mythical newspapers by adding an appropriate title for the paper. Like the Lead Kindly Light, the Kensal Subscription and the Overly Solicitous.

The fool idea spread to Illinois, where a publisher came up with the Pekin Tom and the Robinson Crusoe. A Michigander picked it up and added for his state the Ayr Apparent, Ionia Wanna Buddy and the Saline Solution.

Now comes Georgia's turn. For a starter I give you the Temple Bell, the Trion Times, the Primrose Path, the Newborn Babe and the Axon Receive.

Surely you can do better than that. I'll be a-listenin'.

HOW IT STARTED: Haberdashery to begin with was peddled in haversacks, a Scandinavian word from which it got its name. Millinery came originally from Milan in Italy. What passes for a woman's hat, they say, is often a millinery secret.

RALPH STEPHENS' University of Georgia Press News reports that on the basis of appearance in anthologies the 10 most popular poems in the world are: 1. Wordsworth, "Daffodils"; 2. Milton, "On His Blindness"; 3. Wordsworth, "The World Is Too Much With Us"; 4. Whitman, "O Captain! My Captain!"; 5. Blake, "The Tiger"; 6. Keats, "La Belle Dame Sans Merci"; 7. Gray, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard"; 8. Wordsworth, "Composed Upon Westminster Bridge"; 9. Coleridge, "Kubla Khan"; 10. Keats, "Ode to a Nightingale."

"The Pleasures of Publishing" (Columbia University Press) made the count after running a guessing contest on the subject. Runners-up were: Tennyson, "The Bugle Song" from "The Princess"; Browning, "Home Thoughts From Abroad"; Keats, "Ode to a Grecian Urn"; Kipling, "Recessional"; Wordsworth, "The Solitary Reaper"; Poe, "To Helen."

No, Mercedes, "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star" and "Roses Are Red" were not included.

JEST FOR TODAY: A farmer was making his nightly rounds when he saw a furtive figure beside the barn holding a lantern. "Who are you?" he yelled.

"It's only me—Jim," the intruder answered with a giggle.

"What are you doing here so late?"

"Er—I'm courting Sarah."

"But why the lantern?" the farmer inquired.

"When I was courting the missus, I didn't take a lantern."

"Yes, sir, Jim answered, solemnly.

GIs Give $16 Million Korea Aid

NEW YORK, June 17—(INS). Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower told today how American soldiers fighting in Korea have contributed, out of their meager pay, between $16 and $20 million to aid South Korean war victims.

Dr. Eisenhower, president of Pennsylvania State College, spoke as chairman of the American-Korean Foundation, which has launched a nationwide campaign to raise $5 million for Korean war relief.

Eisenhower and other speakers were guests at a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where business leaders heard witnesses report on the suffering of the Korean people after nearly four years of war.

BROTHER AND CONFIDANT
Robert R. Young, chairman of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, host at the luncheon, introduced Dr. Eisenhower as "the brother, confidant and right hand of the President."

Dr. Eisenhower said, "History has decreed that a major battle between communism and the free world should be fought on the soil of Korea."

The long suffering people of Korea, he said, should be able to expect in return "a minimum of friendly interest from all the rest of the free world."

TOTAL INSIGNIFICANT
Eisenhower emphasized that the foundation's goal of $5 million was "insignificant" by comparison with what American soldiers, fighting and dying in Korea, have done and are doing out of their own funds to relieve suffering.

He expressed the hope that in a few months perhaps "a great friendship train" will roll across America laden with supplies for Korea.

The suffering of the Korean people was described in stark but moving language by Dr. Howard A. Rusk, who headed a recent mission to Korea for an on-the-spot survey of needs.

2 Trustees Flee DeKalb Work Detail

Two trusty prisoners fled from a DeKalb County work detail near Stone Mountain and escaped in a 1940 model sedan, police said. The car was found abandoned later on the Old Norcross Rd. in Gwinnett County.

Officers identified the two as Willie (Pinkie) Carter, serving two years in an auto larceny case, and Gladstone Hornbuckle, 27, serving 12 months on charges of drunk driving.

The break was made at 9 a. m. from a work detail on the Stone Mountain-Redan Rd., near the Stone Mountain city limits, police said.

Milk-Bottle Death Of Restaurateur Ruled Accident

A Fulton County coroner's jury Wednesday ruled that Elmo Brown, 41, Atlanta restaurateur, was accidentally killed June 10 when he fell on a broken milk bottle in his apartment, 193 Hurt St., N. E.

Detective Lt. L. T. Bullard said Mr. Brown evidently was attempting to place two quart milk bottles in the refrigerator when he dropped one bottle, breaking it. Bullard added Mr. Brown evidently slashed an artery in his left wrist when he fell against the jagged glass.

Evidence indicated the restaurateur operator, who was alone, attempted to stop the flow of blood by applying a tourniquet. Bullard related. He said when that attempt failed, Mr. Brown lifted the telephone receiver to call for help, but was too weak to complete the call.

2 ESCAPE SERIOUS INJURY IN PLANE CRASH AT COLLEGE PARK CEMETERY
Small Craft Cracked Up After Pilot Attempted Emergency Landing On Road

2 Fliers Spared in Cemetery Crash Landing

Two persons narrowly escaped serious injury Wednesday when a small plane crash-landed in the College Park Cemetery soon after taking off from Municipal Airport, police said.

The plane, a Swift 85, was demolished. The pilot, Clarence Edward Grubbs Jr., 33, of 1533 Sylvan Dr., Brookhaven, was treated at Grady Hospital for a broken jaw, face lacerations and possible internal injuries.

Sgt. J. B. Dickey and Ptl. P. E. Arnold of the College Park police said a passenger, identified as Ralph Healey, who had purchased the plane a few hours before the crash, refused medical aid at Grady. Grubbs, a veteran of seven years' flying and owner of a similar plane, radioed the control tower soon after takeoff that he was unable to gain altitude and was turning back, police said.

At Grady Grubbs told Atlanta Ptl. W. G. Manders the plane began to lose altitude soon after clearing tree tops and that he "nosed it over" one time in an attempt to gain more speed for a climb. He said when he saw he could not return to the field, he attempted to land on a road running through the cemetery.

Render L. Terrell of 515 North Jackson St., College Park, saw the landing and pulled the two occupants from the wreckage. Charlie Withers of 307 North Jackson St., said it was a "beautifully executed crash landing."

7 New Juvenile Jobs Cited In Answer to Staff Critics

County commissioners said Wednesday seven new jobs were created in 1952 in the juvenile court where personnel needs are under investigation by the grand jury.

Commission Chairman James Aldredge said "we've leaned over backwards for (Juvenile) Judge W. W. Woolfolk" who requested the investigation.

Woolfolk has said he could not maintain order in the juvenile detention home without more attendants. Police were called to quell a riot there Saturday night and found two inmates armed with guns and knives.

Commissioners said Judge Woolfolk never had presented a formal request for more guards and cited an increase in costs of the Juvenile Court from $85,000 in 1946 to $171,000 this year.

The commission also voted to award the 1954 annual audit to an independent firm of certified public accountants. County Auditors Respass & Respass will complete the job this year.

The Respasses also will continue to perform administrative budgetary duties.

The separation of administrative and annual audit duties was adopted following a recommendation from the grand jury.

Georgia Solon Demands Impeachment of Douglas

Supreme Court Weighs
Rosenbergs' Stay Today

execution probably would be carried out tomorrow night.

NEW POINT OF LAW

Douglas based his order solely upon a point of law that had not hitherto been presented to the high court. This point was whether Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman had power to impose the death penalty unless it had been recommended by a jury.

The challenge to Judge Kaufman's power was raised by two obscure lawyers who were not even counsel for the Rosenbergs. When they sought to present it in Judge Kaufman's court in New York on Monday he refused to hear it, calling them "intruders and interlopers" who had no standing in the case. Yet they and not the imposing battery of lawyers that officially represented the Rosenbergs, prevailed with Justice Douglas and brought about a strange and confused situation that veteran officials of the court said had never arisen before.

Fyke Farmer of Nashville, Tenn., and Daniel G. Marshall of Los Angeles were the lawyers. They presented to Douglas the contention that the General Espionage Act of 1917 under which the Rosenbergs were sentenced had been superseded by Section 10 of the Atomic Energy Act, passed in 1946.

JURY RECOMMENDATION

That section provides that "the death penalty or imprisonment for life may be imposed (in espionage cases) only upon recommendation of the jury and only in cases where the offense was committed with intent to injure the United States."

If that provision were applicable, Douglas stated in a written opinion, the District Court was without power to impose the death penalty. He granted the stay of execution until the District Court and the Court of Appeals can determine and applicability of section 10 to the Rosenbergs' case.

"The Rosenbergs," Douglas said, "should have an opportunity to litigate that issue."

In addition to provoking action by the Attorney General that resulted in a special term being called for the third time in the history of the court, according to experienced officials of the tribunal, Douglas's action drew sharp public criticism.

WHEELER RESOLUTION

Representative Wheeler of Alma, Ga., introduced in the House of Representatives a resolution for the impeachment of Justice Douglas. It read:

"That William O. Douglas, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, be impeached of high crimes and misdemeanors in office."

Later Wheeler introduced a second resolution which would authorize the judiciary committee to "inquire into and investigate the official conduct" of Justice Douglas to determine if he has been guilty of "any high crimes or misdemeanors" that would warrant impeachment proceedings.

The congressman said the second bill would give Douglas "his day in court if he wants it."

PROMPT HEARING

Representative Reed (Rep., Ill.), chairman of the judiciary committee, said the committee would give Wheeler a prompt hearing on his resolutions.

Telegrams and telephone calls, most of them highly critical of Douglas' action, began arriving at the Supreme Court almost immediately after news of the stay reached the public.

A suggestion that the Rosenbergs be subpoenaed to testify before a House judiciary subcommittee regarding their knowledge of espionage in the United States was made by Representative Hillings (Rep., Calif.), a member of the subcommittee. That group has been investigating the Department of Justice for nearly two years.

The Rosenbergs were indicted, Justice Douglas pointed out, under the General Espionage Act, section 32 of which provided that whoever violated its provisions against espionage for a foreign country in time of war should be punished by death or imprisonment.

ACTS PUT AT 1944-45

The indictment was returned in 1951, but the overt acts charged against the Rosenbergs were alleged to have taken place in 1944 and 1945.

The Atomic Energy Act became effective on Aug. 1, 1946.

"If the Atomic Energy Act of 1946 is applicable to the prosecution of the Rosenbergs," Douglas said, "the District Court unlawfully imposed the death sentence."

The contention of the Department of Justice is that the atomic act is not applicable because the overt acts charged to the Rosenbergs were committed before its enactment.

Burn Red Propaganda—Ike Agrees

designed to give the people more information about government activities. It would modify a Truman administration order empowering many U. S. agencies to clamp security restrictions on certain information.

The President also told his news conference:

1. The riots sweeping East Berlin are significant in that they disprove the Communist myth of general happiness in countries behind the Iron Curtain.

2. He has assured South Korean President Rhee that no sell-out is involved in the armistice terms to which the United Nations have agreed—that South Korea's fears the U. N. has weakened in its determination to halt aggression are completely groundless.

3. The recent Red offensive in Korea demonstrates the Communists' complete indifference to human life. Either that, the President said, or the Communists are not sincere in seeking an armistice. On this point he said he could not be sure.

A newsman asked Eisenhower at the outset if his Dartmouth speech was intended to be "critical of a school of thought represented by Sen. McCarthy."

IKE PREPARED

Plainly, the President was ready for that one. In crisp, measured tones he replied that he never talked personalities.

Then he said that at Dartmouth he was not talking about any document that attempts to persuade or propagandize America to communism.

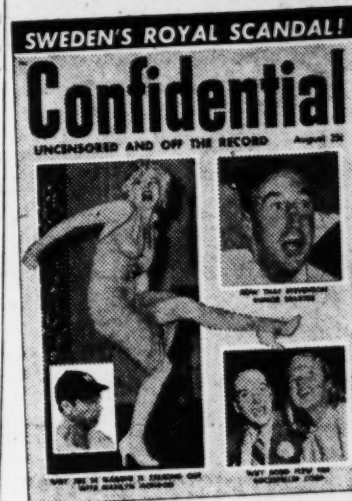

If the State Department is burning a book which is an open appeal for people in foreign countries to become Communists, he said at another point, they—meaning the State Department—can do as they please to get rid of them.

Manpower Panel Gets $280,000

NEW YORK, June 17—The National Manpower Council, established two years ago by President Eisenhower, has been awarded a grant of $280,000 by the Ford Foundation. It was announced today.

The council, established at Columbia University's graduate school of business, makes a continuous appraisal of the nation's manpower problems and policies. Last year it published a book urging continued support of the present student deferment program and recommended that dependents be removed as a ground for deferment in order to insure that such deferments do not extend into exemption.

REDUCES STAFF
Charles Redwine

Redwine To Fire 50 As of July 1

Georgia Revenue Commissioner Charles Redwine announced today that 50 employees in his department have been dismissed, effective July 1.

Redwine said the dismissals—the most sweeping action yet taken in Governor Talmadge's economy drive—are necessary, though regrettable, because of cuts in the revenue department budget for the 1953-54 fiscal year.

"We simply will not have the money available to pay their salaries," Redwine said.

Meanwhile, Doctor T. F. Sellers reported that "12 to 15" employees will be discharged from the health department by July 1. Sellers, director of the department, said most of these employees are in the field survey program, which gives free tests for tuberculosis and venereal diseases.

The governor recently demanded an across-the-board, six per cent reduction of all State department budgets for the next fiscal year. Redwine said he has been notified the budget for his department will be cut by $225,000.

A saving of about $125,000 is anticipated through the dismissals, with the other $100,000 saved, according to Redwine, by a "general belt tightening" in the department.

The Revenue commissioner added that the discharged employees have been notified of their dismissals, that the cuts were made on the basis of essential work, and that the move was "forced" since there are no programs or services which can be reduced in their stead.

Announcement of some dismissals in other departments is anticipated, because employees must have two weeks notice before July 1. There are unconfirmed reports that the legal department has notified three persons of their dismissals and that the Secretary of State plans to lay off four employees. Several departments, however, have been able to eliminate services and programs instead of employees.

Harris Booms Scott in Race For Governor

Roy Harris, Augusta political leader often referred to as a "kingmaker" of Georgia politics, currently is booming Fred Scott Sr. of Thomasville as a "friendly and outstanding Georgian who might be our next governor."

The Thomasville Times-Enterprise and The Adel News already have carried editorials suggesting Scott as a candidate. And this week Harris devoted a large portion of his paper, The Augusta Courier, to an article lauding Scott as a man "who would have to be reckoned with" if he should decide to run.

A former legislator prominent in the administrations of E. D. Rivers and the late Eugene Talmadge, Scott is an active business, political and civic leader. In recent years he has been regarded as anti-Talmadge.

The Thomasville man is president of several companies, including a bank, manufacturing and construction firms and a radio station. His son, Fred Scott Jr., served in the 1951-52 legislature.

Meanwhile, Harris lists State Highway Chairman Jim Gillis, Lt. Gov. Marvin Griffin and House Speaker Fred Hand as among the most likely candidates. Gillis has the endorsement of several newspapers, including The Savannah Morning News and The Millen News, published by Rep. Walter Harrison. Other potential candidates include Harris, former Acting Gov. M. E. Thompson, Public Service Commissioner Walter R. McDonald, Lon Duckworth, Atlanta attorney, and Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder.

Women's Chamber of Commerce To Hold Formal Opening Thursday

A reception from 10:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Thursday will mark the formal opening of the Women's Chamber of Commerce's new offices at 206 Henry Grady Building.

Miss Gertrude Stanford, president, said more than 300 guests are expected to attend. Leaders of civic organizations have been invited, she said.

Regional VA Offices Not To Move, Atlanta Told

Veterans' Administration officials in Washington Wednesday told The Constitution reports that regional VA offices in Atlanta will be moved are unfounded.

Nothing is planned in the way of reorganizing regional offices, a VA spokesman said.

Rumors about the regional offices' future have cropped up periodically since three years ago when the VA considered a proposal to consolidate Atlanta and Dallas offices.

The VA insisted Wednesday that "nothing is being considered now to disturb the offices in Atlanta."

Independent Swedish settlements in what is now the United States were founded in 1638, taken over by the Dutch in 1655 and by the British 10 years later.

SETS NEW RECORD
Welfare Director Kemper

SERVICE RECORD

Kemper Begins 5th Year

State Welfare Director Alan Kemper this week began his fifth year in office and set a record as having served longer than any other state welfare director in Georgia history.

The previous record was held by A. J. Hartley, now an assistant attorney general. Hartley was state welfare director for three years, 11 months and 27 days—from May, 1943, to May, 1947, under the Arnall and Thompson administrations.

B. S. Miller, serving under the administration of the late Gov. Eugene Talmadge, had the next longest tenure of office—two years and four months. Only one other man, Lamar Murdaugh, filled the post for more than a year. Murdaugh was the first director of the department when it was created under the administration of F. D. Rivers, and served for one year and 10 months.

The department has been directed successively by Murdaugh, Braswell Deen, Joseph M. Branch Jr., Miller, Hartley, L. C. (Tiny) Groves, W. E. Ireland, J. M. Forrester and Kemper.

A Jonesboro attorney and newspaper publisher, Kemper took the welfare department helm June 13, 1949, at the request of Governor Talmadge. He was treasurer of the Highway department at the time and succeeded Forrester, who after six and a half months in office had become involved in a dispute with doctors at Milledgeville State Hospital over whether a doctor or a businessman should be the administrative head of the hospital.

Kemper, too, has been involved in disputes in this difficult assignment and has developed stomach ulcers. He was criticized a few years ago in the dismissal of Miss Loretto Chappell, a child welfare worker, when he termed social workers an "abomination." And more recently his administration has been under fire for the administration of the girls training school at Adamsville.

But Kemper, a conservative, amiable, rugged individualist, has merited praise as well as criticism for his conduct of the office. He has been particularly commended for improvements made at Milledgeville State Hospital during his administration.

At least twice Kemper has seriously considered resigning, but was persuaded to remain on the job. He was tempted to resign during recent criticism of the girls training school, but chose not to quit under fire and promptly moved to improve conditions at the school.

Walsh Elected Commander of Legion Post 134

Frank O. Walsh Jr. has been elected commander of American Legion Post 134 in Atlanta, and H. Z. Hopkins has been named senior vice-commander.

Other new officers are Robert L. Ramsey, junior vice-commander; Robert B. Vance, finance officer; Henry A. Alexander, historian; Alex M. Hinz, assistant historian; Dr. Albert K. Mathews, chaplain; Col. John P. Esaias, assistant chaplain, and William M. Daniel, Calhoun McDougald, Justus C. Martin, members of the executive committee.

Before the turn of the century, gasoline, being dangerous in lamps, was an unwanted product and kerosene was the mainstay of the petroleum industry.

State Young GOPs Lead U. S. Move To Lower Voting Age

Georgia's young Republicans are taking the lead in a national movement toward reducing the voting eligibility age to 18 years, an experiment that has proven successful in this state.

Cecil Hartness, former legislator from Fannin County, said he and the Georgia delegation to the national convention of Young Republicans at Rapid City, S. D., got the national organization to adopt a platform plank urging that the voter franchise be extended to 18-year-olds.

Hartness, national vice-chairman of the young GOP federation, first obtained approval from regional and southern groups of young Republicans before going to the platform committee and calling on Congress and state legislatures to act to lower the voting age.

The former Fannin County lawmaker introduced and obtained convention adoption of a resolution commending President Eisenhower and his associates for endorsing the 18-year-old vote and calling on Congress and state legislatures to act to lower the voting age.

When Hartness was only 25 he fought for legislative passage in Georgia in 1943 of the law that made Georgia the first and only state to grant voting privileges to 18-year-olds. And he pointed out to the national convention at Rapid City last week that the law has proven successful in this state after a ten-year trial.

The Georgia delegation at Rapid City included Hartness, Robert E. Drakes, Jeff Watts and D. R. Jones, all of Decatur; Roy Foster Jr., of Wadley, and David Brown of Atlanta.

Rhee Lets 25,000 Out Of PW Pens

ROKs Attempting To Scuttle Truce

Duk, South Korean provost marshal general.

Won threatened to "dispose of" anyone who detains the escaped prisoners without his permission. He claimed in a noon broadcast that "all" anti-Communist North Korean prisoners had been freed, but his statement could not be confirmed.

ARMS THREAT

"Whoever detains and interns these youths without my permission will be disposed of by force of arms," he said.

Reliable sources said high UN officers had feared Rhee would take some drastic action in his efforts to block an armistice that would leave Korea divided, but that it was decided to leave the South Korean guards on duty at the camps situated near Pusan and Masan.

The prisoners trampled fences and barricades at four different prisoner of war camps in making their mass escape.

Rhee's action was in open defiance of the UN command and Allied commitments in the truce negotiations at Panmunjom. It could delay the armistice agreement which reportedly was to be signed within the week. There was no immediate Communist reaction to Rhee's action and statement.

WON'T EXPAND

"The reason why I did this without full consultation with the United Nations command and other authorities is too obvious to explain," Rhee said.

South Korea had opposed the armistice agreement on war prisoners, which would keep anti-Communist captives in prison for possibly seven months while their fate was being discussed by a post-armistice political conference. The Communists agreed to the prisoner of war compromise after long debate.

Rhee's statement made it clear that the action represented South Korea's continuing and violent opposition to any armistice that leaves Korea divided.

Rhee said he had asked officials as well as the Korean people to take care of the released prisoners, who were reported fleeing into villages and mingling with the local population.

"We trust all our people and our friends will co-operate in this so that there will be no unnecessary misunderstanding anywhere," he said.

RADIO STORY

Won said over the Seoul Radio that he ordered his men to take over the four prison camps in the Pusan and Masan area and to release "patriotic prisoners."

The South Korean guards allowed the escaping prisoners to flee the camps without firing a shot. Barbed wire fences were trampled in what first was reported as a "co-ordinated mass breakout."

"I declare at home and abroad that this is an execution of our self right and self defense," Won said over the Seoul Radio. "That is, to fight and win unification." He coupled his announcement with an appeal to the "democracies" to "advance to the North and unite the country."

CLARK OFFICE

Gen. Mark W. Clark's headquarters officers in Tokyo were shocked by the news.

An agreement on the prisoner of war problem was reached only recently after more than two years of debate. Prisoners not desiring repatriation would be released as civilians if their fate was not settled by a post-armistice political conference.

General Won did not announce his order over the Seoul Radio until six and a half hours after the North Koreans poured out of the camps. South Korean guards did not fire on them, but the UN prisoner of war command said tear gas was used.

WOTTA CATCH—CHICAGO, June 17—Larry Cokenower, 12 (left), and Walt Myers, 13, went fishing. Instead of the usual six-inches the Des Plaines River affords, the boys hooked this 4½-foot alligator that weighed 60 pounds. They killed the reptile with oars from their boat and hauled it to shore.

Communists. No full meeting of the chief negotiators has been scheduled, but a meeting can be called at any time.

The camps in which the North Koreans were held were No. 6 at Nansan, No. 7 at Masan, No. 9 at Pusan, and No. 5 at Sang Mudai.

The UN prisoner of war command recently listed 32,600 non-Communist-North Korean prisoners and 14,000 non-Communist Chinese, in addition to 6,000 Communist Chinese and 66,000 Communist North Koreans.

OFFERS PLEA

"Friendly nations of the world are requested to see correctly our disdainful action and reflect on consideration of the new means of how to stop Communist aggression," Won said in his broadcast.

"I call upon our patriotic fellow countrymen, especially in the Army, police and patriotic youth and villagers in the vicinity of the camps to co-operate fully with our military personnel under my command in order to contribute to brilliant establishment in world history by executing the risk of death to protect freedom and peace against communism."

Tanks Back Martial Law As 50,000 Berliners Riot clashes occurred last night in Alexander Platz, Potsdamer Platz and Stalin Allee (Boulevard). Russian troops and Communist police fired repeatedly at demonstrators.

STORE AFIRE

Anti-Communists raided an old Communist store at Potsdamer Platz and set it ablaze. They also put Haus Vaterland, a Communist restaurant in the vicinity, to the torch.

The Soviet armored division passed close by the West Berlin frontier district of Lichtenrade. For more than three hours, before darkness fell, it could be seen rolling along a zonal highway to the Eastern part of the city.

It had T43 tanks, larger in size and gunpower than the famous T34. There were batteries of field artillery and anti-tank guns, drawn by trucks.

Hundreds of armored carriers and open trucks carried the steel-helmeted infantry.

The rioters burned police sentry boxes, hauled down Red flags, smashed a dozen government sedans, man-handled German Communist officials and shouted "Jen go home" in a spontaneous venting of emotions piled up through the postwar years.

A Communist peace offensive stunt had backfired in the Soviet sector of this four-power city, 100 miles deep within the Russian zone. A Communist-run parade of 5,000 workers Tuesday, gently demanding lighter work schedules already promised by the government, set the stage for the unorganized outburst yesterday.

The railway strike came as thousands of state railway employees walked out in sympathy with anti-Communist East Berlin workers. Strike fever appeared to be spreading.

The East sector's city officials urgently appealed to the people to "secure the supply of Berliners" and to "start up peaceful, constructive work in your plants." The appeal disclosed Communist anxiety that food and other provisions of East Berlin, which was supplied fully throughout the Soviet blockade of West Berlin in 1948-49, might soon run out.

Twenty Soviet T34 heavy tanks, a field artillery battery, armored cars and nearly 3,000 armored and motorized infantrymen finally broke up the day's big rioting with a steady show of force.

The order by Maj. Gen. P. T. Dibrova of the Soviet Command turned East Berlin into an armed camp last night.

Ten thousand Communist East German police, including militarized units, had failed to halt the uprisings by the workers before the Soviet army cracked down.

In regulations that shoved back the clock to 1945, all citizens were ordered off the streets between 9 p. m. and 5 a. m. Assemblies of more than three persons were banned. Russian military courts were empowered to try offenders.

The target of bitter hatred by the working masses, the puppet government was reported on the verge of a drastic shakeup.

Why Do Women Buy? 'Just Because,' Reports Retailer

OTTAWA, June 17 (AP)—Why do women buy?

At the convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association today, Mrs. W. R. Walton Jr., national president of the Canadian Association of Consumers, quoted a big retailer who gave nine reasons:

Because everybody has one. Because it makes them look thin. Because it's imported—it must be good. Because nobody has one like it. Because it's going to be scarce.

Because it's pretty. Because it's a bargain. Just because.

ATLANTA'S TRANSIT SYSTEM COVERS AREA LIKE A GLOVE

If you could see the map of Greater Atlanta in the photograph above, you would find only a few thinly populated areas which are not within a short walk of a trolley or bus line.

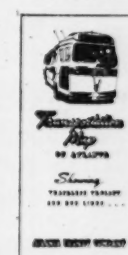

In Atlanta's transit system there are more than 380 miles: over 235 in Atlanta Transit's primary system and over 145 miles in Metropolitan Transit's suburban system.

Atlanta has more miles of route per thousand population than any one of 16 cities with similar populations. The buses and trolleys in the Atlanta Transit system alone travel an average of 58,300 miles each day! That is equal to more than two trips around the world every day!

Since 1946, improved service has been provided to 25 new areas not previously served. Whenever it is possible to add new routes, or extend old ones, this is done.

Just as Atlanta can be proud of many things about its transit system, it can also be proud of the area served.

Trio Named To Head '53 Fund Drive

Marshall B. Hall, I. M. Sheffield Jr. and Hix H. Green Wednesday were named general chairmen for the Community Services drive which opens in Atlanta in mid-September.

Edward D. Smith, president of Metropolitan Atlanta Community Services, named the trio to head the organization which was formed early this year to succeed the old Community Chest and the Community Planning Council.

The financial campaign, the first to be conducted by the organization's Chest Fund Raising Division, will seek to raise operating funds for 34 Red Feather agencies serving youngsters, elderly persons, the sick and the handicapped in Fulton and DeKalb Counties.

Community Services directors are scheduled to meet at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Life Insurance Company of Georgia to hear reports from the budget committee and to establish a goal.

Under chairmanship of Robert F. Whitaker, the 40 businessmen and women on the budget committee have spent almost two months studying financial needs of member agencies. Their report will be based on actual costs of providing these services in the most economical manner possible.

Leaders of this year's drive will be aided by a book entitled "Plan of Campaign for the 1953 Red Feather Drive."

The book contains experiences of campaign chairmen for the past two years. It was compiled by the Chest Division Steering Board headed by Frank M. Ridley. The Plan will give continuity

Korea War Vets From Hospital To See Ball Game

Korea War veterans from Veterans General Hospital will be guests of honor at a Veterans Appreciation Day program to be held at Ponce de Leon Park June 21 in connection with a Sunday double header between the Atlanta Crackers and the Memphis Chickies.

Jimmy Vickers, program chairman, said the American Legion, Forty and Eight and the Jewish War Veterans are sponsoring the event as a token of appreciation to the Atlanta Baseball Association for its policy of admitting service men and women free to Cracker baseball games.

Amputees from the Veterans Hospital will be brought to the ball park in the prize-winning locomotive and box car of Atlanta Vulture 217 of the Forty and Eight, Vickers said. A special program will be presented between games.

Mossadegh Party Calls Mass Rally

TEHRAN, Iran, June 17 — (AP) — Premier Mohammed Mossadegh's national movement today called a mass meeting in Parliament Square for Friday to hear what it described as an exposure of how opposition tactics are hamstringing the government.

Ayatollah Kashani, powerful Moslem religious leader and a foe of Mossadegh, charged the rally was a plot to seize the Parliament building. He ordered Parliament guards who are under his control as speaker of the house, to take "necessary precautions."

Hall, president of the Trust Company of Georgia, also has served as budget committee chairman.

Quick Sale Of School Bond Seen

The state School Building Authority was cautiously optimistic Wednesday on the outcome of their attempt to sell $66,000,000 worth of school bonds.

Fred Hand, chairman of the authority, and State Auditor B. E. Thrasher, a member, met Tuesday in New York with representatives from 34 companies which are interested in buying the certificates.

Hand said he is "definitely encouraged" and hopes to sell the entire issue at an early date. He said he asked the syndicate for a definite offer in two weeks.

"We don't know yet what kind of proposition they will make, but I think there is a good chance we will get what we want," he predicted.

Thrasher shared Hand's confidence in the transaction. "We're optimistic since they didn't turn us down," he said.

Hand said they were questioned for several hours about the state's laws and finances and "all our answers seemed to satisfy them."

The Authority already has sold $33,000,000 worth of school bonds through New York connections and last week gave the go-ahead to dispose of $66,000,000 more.

Chastain Amphitheater Parking Lots Are Ready

By MARJORY SMITH

Two parking lots in the area of Chastain Memorial Park Amphitheater, constructed at a cost of $42,000 and designed to accommodate a total of 800 automobiles, are ready for use, City Parks Manager George Simons announced Wednesday.

Simons said parking lots were rushed to completion so that citizens planning to attend the forthcoming series of summer concerts in the Chastain amphitheater will have parking space. Municipal Theater Under-the-Stars, an organization of the Atlanta Opera Co., will present light operas and musical comedies in the amphitheater July 7-Aug. 8.

Scholarly Staff

Two employees of the City Personnel Department received master's degrees during the past week. Carl Sutherland, city personnel director, reported Wednesday. Carl Paul, pay and classification specialist, took a master's degree in industrial management at Georgia Tech. and Frank Wells, personnel testing technician, received his new degree from Emory. One-third of the office staff of 12 now have master's degrees, the other two holders being Sutherland and Edwin Pritchett, head of the department's personnel testing unit.

Train Union Chief To Tell Wage Plans

D. A. MacKenzie of Cleveland, Ohio, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, is expected to outline the union's plan to seek "substantial" wage increases when he addresses members of the Dixie Boosters of the BRT here Thursday night.

His talk will highlight a banquet and dance concluding the three-day convention of the BRT and Ladies' Auxiliary attended by some 500 delegates from 11 Southern states. A business session is scheduled for Thursday morning at the Henry Grady Hotel.

Wednesday, five veteran Atlanta members of the railroad union were cited by BRT President W. P. Kennedy for service with the union totaling 220 years. They are W. T. Dilbeck, C. E. Marshall and L. J. Fisher, 45 years; P. M. Copeland, 33 years, and J. P. Bradley, 50 years.

Kennedy described the men as typical of the "pioneers that built our organization into the large and militant railroad labor union we have today."

3 Corporations Ask State Refund $61,000 Tax

Three out-of-state corporations charged Tuesday that Georgia had erroneously and illegally collected more than $61,000 in income taxes from them.

In complaints filed in Fulton Superior Court, the corporations asked that Revenue Commissioner Charles Redwine be ordered to refund the money.

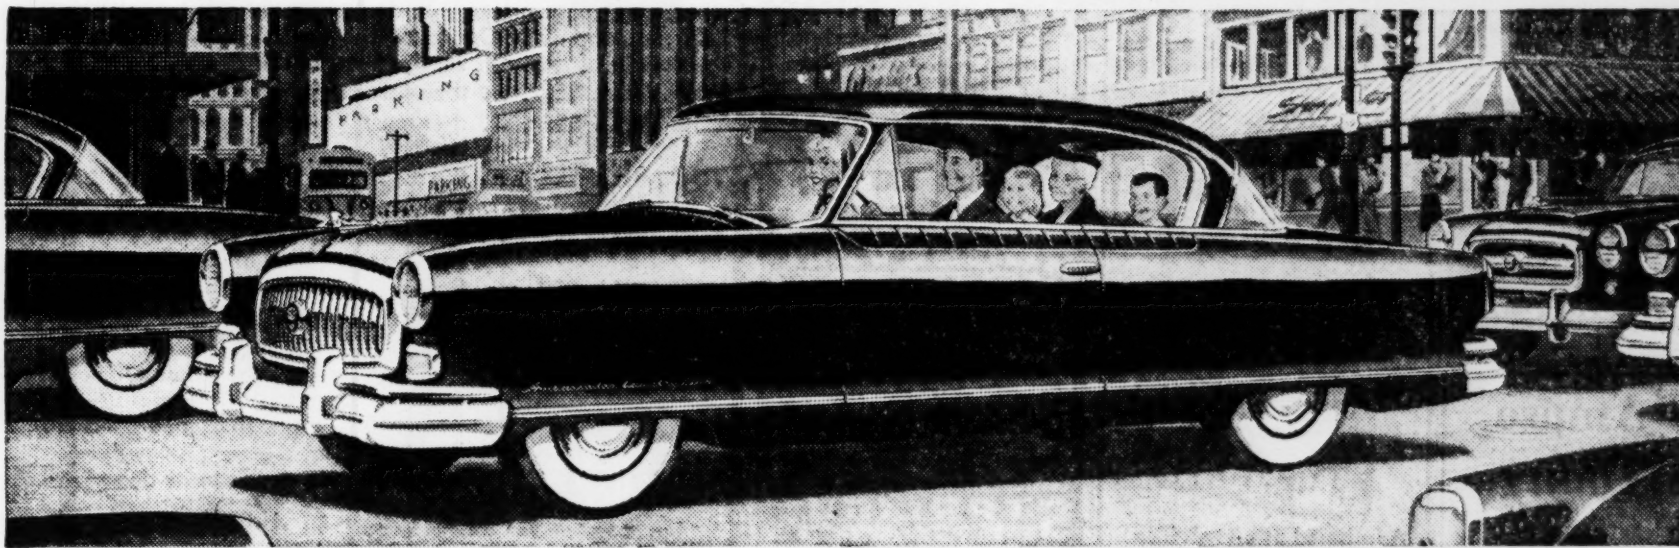

The three—Seagrams Distillers, Calvert Distillers and Browne-Vintners—contended they only conducted solicitation of business in Georgia and so should not be subject to income taxes. Seagrams claimed the state owes it $46,098; Calvert, $13,180, and Browne-Vintners, $1,296.

Sixty-five minutes of striking scenes of royalty—scenes that are alive with realism and yet are so ancient as to seem fantastic in the modern world—make up the technicolor film "A Queen Is Crowned," which opened Wednesday at the Art Theater.

The millions who watched the coronation of Queen Elizabeth on television missed half the show. For it was the gorgeous pageantry of colorful robes, gold braid, gold epaulettes and gold, red and white uniforms and helmets that made the history-making coronation a spectacle of breath-taking beauty.

With its overall scenes of the ceremonies and processions and its emphasis on close-up pictures of Queen Elizabeth and other royal subjects, "A Queen Is Crowned" gives movie fans a view of the coronation that was not to be had even by those who attended or participated in the event.

The picture, with the city's majestic buildings serving as a splendid contrasting background, takes you first along the five-mile royal route of London from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey. There are close-up views of the Queen and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, riding in the ancient golden coach of kings.

The camera captured general scenes of the thousands who marched in the parade and the throngs who massed in London to pay homage to their queen.

Excellent music by the London Symphony Orchestra and the Royal Choral Society accompanies the film.

Sir Lawrence Olivier, British actor, does a magnificent job of narration throughout the film. F. classification.

Two films with foreign settings, "Luxury Girls" and "Guerrilla Girl," opened a double feature program Wednesday at the Roxy.

The setting for "Luxury Girls" is a swanky girls' finishing school in the Italian Alps. The film goes behind the classroom scenes and shows the heartbreaks and romance that form the lives of a group of spoiled, snobbish girls.

Polio Drive Netted $805,000, Rich Says

The people of Georgia contributed $805,000 to the fight against polio in the 1953 March of Dimes—a new record for the state, Richard H. Rich, state chairman, said in announcing final totals from the 152 Georgia chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

He said Georgia's total represents a per capita donation of 23½ cents—compared with 18 cents per capita in 1952.

Meanwhile, in New York, Basil O'Connor, president of the foundation, announced a total of $51,500,000 was donated to the Dimes March over the nation, an increase of more than $10,000,000 over the 1952 total.

Final totals for Georgia showed that all but 22 Georgia chapters had substantial increases this year. The Fulton-DeKalb chapter was up 21 per cent, with $227,112 donated this year.

Half of what is collected in the March of Dimes in the state remains in Georgia to finance the polio fight. The other half goes to the national foundation to help finance research and meet the demands of epidemics.

Rich, officially drawing the drive to a close, paid tribute to the thousands of volunteer workers in the annual campaign, calling their efforts "symbolic of the American spirit."

Muzzling Of Services Out-Kyes

Pentagon Backs Reorganization

By Austin Stevens

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution
WASHINGTON, June 17—Pentagon officials opened their defense today of the far-reaching plan to reorganize top levels of the military establishment. Roger M. Kyes, deputy secretary of defense, denied the plan would create a powerful chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and insisted the new Pentagon plan did not include "muzzling" of service partisans.

Secretary Kyes, appearing before the House committee on government operations, argued heatedly sometimes when prodded by Representative Hoffman, Republican of Michigan and committee chairman, that the reorganization meant only increased "managerial efficiency."

BATTLES RESOLUTION

Kyes sought from the outset of his appearance before the committee to have set aside a joint resolution sponsored by Hoffman which calls for elimination of the joint chiefs and joint staff features of the reorganization.

Opposition has arisen from charges that the plan to give the chairman of the joint chiefs authority over the director of the joint staff, the spade work group for the high-level military planning body, tends toward creation of a too-powerful chairman.

Kyes devoted the major portion of his testimony to an attempt to dispel this idea. He will appear again tomorrow after the committee has heard other witnesses who are expected to make strong attacks on the joint staff provisions of the reorganization.

CHANGES DUE

The President's reorganization plan for the defense department, which is scheduled for congressional approval if neither house, by majority vote, turns it down by June 30, calls for a number of internal Pentagon changes. Among these are the elimination of several committees and boards, which Kyes castigated today as inefficient, in favor of six additional assistant secretaries with authority in such fields as procurement and research and development of weapons.

Kyes contended that the National Security Act was hazy on the duties and responsibilities of the director of the joint staff and that the reorganization plan would give the chairman of the joint chiefs, through authority over the joint staff, power to provide the joint chiefs group with proper agenda.

REMAINS EQUAL

The defense official, replying to statements that the chairman's position would be aggrandized, declared that "the chairman moves to no new position of eminence" but remains a co-equal member with the chiefs of the three armed services.

In defense of the plan Kyes emphasized the need for greater "managerial latitude." He noted that if the joint chiefs chairman were able to manage the joint staff he could relieve the chiefs themselves of administrative detail.

Robert A. Lovett, former secretary of defense, who may be called by the committee as a witness, has said that the joint chiefs have to deal with too much trivial matter that should be settled at lower levels.

Accident Is Top Child Killer, WSB-TV Series Panel Told

Accidents are the major cause of child deaths, a health specialist declared Wednesday during a televised medical forum.

Accident prevention, one of a dozen child health topics discussed, was stressed as a community problem during the "You and Your Health" series televised over WSB-TV.

This was the third in a series of eight television forums being presented by The Atlanta Journal in co-operation with the Fulton County Medical Society.

Dr. T. Bolling Gay, panel speaker, emphasized that community health depends on the health department and physicians within a community, and that the stress is on prevention rather than cures of diseases.

Dr. H. Henry Poer, moderator, quizzed Drs. Richard W. Blumberg, C. Dixon Fowler and Roger W. Dickson on questions submitted by viewers.

The worst childhood disease today, according to Dr. Fowler, is rheumatic fever. The most easily recognized symptom, he said, is joint pains that continually move from one joint to another.

Britain Reaffirms Ban On Strategic Red Cargoes

LONDON, June 17—The Churchill government today promised to stand by the United Nations ban on shipment of strategic goods to Red China. It denied that British ships transported Communist troops in Korean waters.

Britain will enforce the embargo on strategic goods "so long as the UN resolution of May 18, 1951, is in force," Parliamentary Foreign Undersecretary Anthony Nutting told the House of Commons in a written reply to Laborite questions.

PENALTIES READY

"If any of our ships were to contravene these regulations they would be liable to be hunted down on the high seas by British naval vessels and their managers and masters would become liable to severe penalties," Nutting added.

In the first government statement on charges before the U. S. Senate investigating committee that two British ships carried Chinese Communist troops, Nutting said "all information available to the government indicates that these allegations are completely unfounded."

"References have been made to two ships called the 'Perico' and the 'Miamar,'" Nutting said. "These were under the Panamanian flag at the time of the incidents in 1951 and 1952. They were neither flying nor entitled to fly the British flag and therefore were not subject to British law."

"The fact that a British national or company may own shares or have an interest in a foreign company owning the vessel does not give the British Government any legal control over the vessel, or entitle that vessel to fly the British flag."

COUNTRY'S CONTROL

"In such cases the control rests with the country whose flag the vessel is entitled to fly. This principle has long been internationally accepted."

The Churchill government has not received any official representations from Washington about this alleged use of British vessels, he said.

Nutting said Britain recently further tightened up its controls to insure that British vessels or other ships refueling in British ports do not carry strategic materials to Red China, but he added:

"With regard to goods which are not the subject of these security controls, it is the policy of the government to develop trade with countries of the Soviet bloc and with China, we cannot live without trade and we consider that this trade is nonstrategic goods is to the advantage of the free world."

Family Battles Son's Death Charge Stupor

BALTIMORE, June 17—The mother and sister of a soldier accused of murder came here today from Arkansas to try to snap him out of a stupor doctors say he's been in since the murder charge was filed.

Doctors term the condition of Sgt. Richard M. Elkins "acute psychosis." They said the 26-year-old sergeant, stationed at nearby Ft. Holabird, has been silent and "does not respond to anything we do or say."

Elkins was arrested last week at Danville, Va., along with Eric Preston Randall, Baltimore youth. Both are charged with murder in the fatal shooting of John Metzger.

Child Spacing Urged in War On Abortions

Medically approved child spacing service by licensed physicians will cut down on the "alarming" number of abortion cases in this country, the Planned Parenthood Association of Atlanta was told Wednesday at the Young Women's Christian Association.

Mrs. Miriam F. Garwood of New York, field consultant of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, said that 90 per cent of the number of known abortion cases involve married women who already have children.

Georgia is in great need of planned parenthood because of the high mother and infant death rate in the 18,000 cases of babies delivered annually by 1,300 midwives in the state, she said.

The Atlanta group discussed plans for organization of a planned parenthood league of Georgia and the possibility of a nurses' institute sponsored by the proposed league.

Schooner Believed Lost On Voyage From England

NORFOLK, Va., June 17—A message washed ashore in a bottle near Myrtle Beach, S. C., today, indicating a 32-foot schooner wrecked June 9 on the way from Liverpool, England, to Charleston, S. C., the Coast Guard said here tonight.

The Coast Guard at Norfolk said it had relayed the message to Seventh Coast Guard District Headquarters at Miami, Fla., for investigation. No search is planned in the tidewater Virginia area, the Coast Guard said.

A position given in the message proved incorrect for the location of survivors of a small raft, the Coast Guard said. The position checked inshore about 30 miles from Lagoon, N. C.

This was the message in the bottle:

"To whom it may concern: Please help 32-foot schooner wrecked June 9, 1953, sailed from Liverpool, England, May 15, destination Charleston, S. C., on small raft, position latitude 34.5 north, longitude 78.5 west."

Collision on Pool Slide Sends 2 to Hospital

A collision on the sliding board at the Oakland City swimming pool Wednesday sent two Atlanta youths to the hospital, police said.

Hoyt Tate, 17, of 216 Melrose Dr., S. W., was sliding down the chute when he bumped heads with Tony Barton, 10, of 167 St. Michael Ave., S. W., Partolman H. E. Daniel and T. V. Mullinax said.

They were treated at Grady Hospital for one-inch cuts on the head.

Elephant Attacks Man Parked Near Circus

BRECKINRIDGE, Minn., June 17—Otto Nygren, 66, awoke with a start today and saw an elephant pushing his truck.

Nygren hopped out and tried to scare the beast away, but the elephant, enraged, picked Nygren up with its trunk and flipped him over the truck.

Nygren was in critical condition at St. Francis Hospital here with a broken arm, fractured ribs and damaged lung.

He told police he came to town Tuesday night to see the circus. It was too late to go home, Nygren said, so he drove the truck about two blocks from the circus grounds and went to sleep.

At daybreak he felt the truck move. He looked out and there it was—an elephant that had broken his shackles and was wandering in the town's residential district. Circus handlers led the elephant away.

A Homesick Island Girl

Jackie Pung was like the boy in the song about the little grass shack in Kealahou, Hawaii—homesick. If you've ever been to the beautiful Pacific islands, even under military duress, you'd know the reason why. The warm, tropical sun, the soft wind that rustles the palms, the lulling strum and the chant of the Hawaiian music that fills the kilocycles of Honolulu from dawn to midnight, and the graceful sweep of the city as it rises up the cliffs and bluffs to its abrupt meeting with the rugged mountains.

And for Jackie Pung, a husband, two daughters and home. It all caused her to be heavily beset by doubts as she cranked up and walloped a few wood shots out of sight from a spot adjacent to the 18th green at Capital City Club. She was about to make her attack for the Women's Western Open title.

"I just wonder if it's worth it sometimes," she said. She rested the club-head on the ground and leaned lightly on the shaft. "I miss my husband so much, and I've got two daughters growing up and they need a mother now. I can give them things they never had before playing golf, but it keeps me away from them. I sometimes think about just forgetting it all and going home. I don't know what to do."

Jackie flew home for six days earlier this month to be decorated the islands' woman athlete of the year. It was the first time she'd seen Barney, her husband, since she came to the States and won the Women's USGA Amateur at Portland, Ore., last September.

"I could see him looking at me out of the corner of his eye trying to see if I was the same. I'd changed and he knew it. I asked him if I'd changed any, and he said no, none at all. But I knew I had and I knew he knew it. You can tell. I was a little shy when I left to come over here. I wasn't shy any more. I can't be. He could tell it."

—Knitting Needles and a Ball of Yarn

It read like one of the clichés of the decade when Mrs. Jacqueline Liwai Pung turned professional last January. She was plump (5-3, 210 pounds) and sturdily constructed. She could hit the ball a mile. She was colorful. Alvin Handmacher, the dress manufacturer who sponsors the Weatherlane series of tournaments, signed her to a contract.

It read like a cliché because nobody was giving any thought to Barney Pung, the husband, and the two Pung daughters, except Jackie. She looks like a homebody. Her face is soft and friendly. She wears a pair of school teacher's spectacles. She looks like a good neighbor, one who'd be more at home with a set of knitting needles and a ball of yarn than a driver, putter and irons.

"My father just had a stroke last week," she said. "I'd like to be with him, but I can't. But I sent him a check for $500. I can give him medical attention he'd never been able to have, but I can't be with him. You see how it is."

Jackie married Barney Pung 13 years ago. He's a fireman in Honolulu, a slip of a fellow who weighs about 140 pounds. She'd been playing golf since she was 10, mostly on a public course on the island of Oahu. The rich folks play at Oahu and Waialae country clubs.

MRS. JACKIE PUNG HITS ONE A MILE
A Homesick Hawaiian Who'd Make A Good Neighbor

She made her first pass at stateside golf in the National Amateur at Tulsa in 1946 and went out in the first round. She came back again in '48 at Pebble Beach, beat oldtimer Glenna Collett Vare, then lost in the second round. She and Marlene Bauer were medalists in the Western Amateur that year, but the other Bauer, Alice, leveled her in the first round.

—If Barney Comes Over, Look Out!

That was the gist of Jackie's action in the states before she came back to succeed Dot Kirby as the National Amateur title last year. She caused a few official USGA heads to turn in despair when she innocently accepted an invitation to do a hula dance on the clubhouse grass at Portland. In Hawaii, young ladies learn the hula before they learn how to cook.

This success behind her, Jackie gave up her job at Sears and Roebuck in Honolulu and fell for the lure of the gold of professional golf in the States. That was the beginning of her new wealth, but also the beginning of her doubts.

"Barney's coming over to spend his vacation with me," she said. "If everything goes all right, I'm going to have them all with me next year. I'll find a good school for the girls over here and Barney can travel with me on the circuit. That's the way it ought to be."

"I see Alice Bauer and her husband (Bob Hegge) together. They're such cute kids, and they work together at golf like a team. It's wonderful. No, Barney's not a good golfer. He plays, but he's a slicer. But we'd be together and that's the main thing."

"I'm not sure yet. I might just go home and stay there. But if I've got my husband over here with me, the rest of these girls can look out. I'll be a different kind of golfer then."

She teed up a ball, whipped the club back and with a stroke that had as much rhythm as any hula, she belted it across a gulch over the head of a shag boy who could only wave at it as it passed. When Barney gets here, look out!

Williams' Streak Includes 104 Chances Without Error

Crackers Open Here Tonight

By JESSE OUTLAR

Whenever the Crackers strike a snag during a friendly argument—whether it's weather or world events—they always call on Charlie Williams, a likeable, gabby little guy who freely volunteers information on any topic.

It's the same whenever Manager Gene Mauch comes up with an infield problem created by injury or a serious slump. Mauch also calls on Williams and, of late, Charlie has been more accurate on the field than off.

In fact, the loquacious handy man has stacked up quite a remarkable fielding mark. Dividing his time between the bench and three infield positions, Williams has handled 104 consecutive chances since committing his last miscue April 26.

Williams has done most of his work at second base as a fill in for Mauch. And at that post, he has registered 47 put-outs and 49 assists without a boot. On a one night stand at first, Williams was credited with five putouts and one assist, and had one and one at third.

For a fellow in the lineup every night, Williams' glove work would be far above par. It's terrific for a man bouncing from position to position, with long intervals on the sidelines.

Mauch considers Williams one of key cogs in the Cracker infield.

"He's, not only valuable," Mauch said Wednesday, "he has

Racquet After Upset Loss

LONDON, June 17.—(AP)—Gardner Mulloy of Miami, America's first-ranking tennis player, angrily stormed off the court of the swank Queen's Club Wednesday after being beaten by an unseeded Australian in the third round of the London tennis tournament.

Lighthouse Star Smith Signed By Waycross

Frank Smith, 6-1, 180-pound Waycross High first baseman who was voted the outstanding player in the recent Lighthouse for the Blind All-Star game in Atlanta, has been signed by the Waycross Bears of the Georgia-Florida League.

The Class D Bears also have signed Jim Spence, Wareboro native who has been throwing his right-handed slants past Georgia Military College foes at Milledgeville for the last three years.

Smith, who plans to enter Emory University and become a doctor, blasted a double and single, batted home two runs, scored three and swiped three bases in the Lighthouse game for the winning South team (11-4).

Wimbledon's Draw Eases U. S. Openers

WIMBLEDON, England, June 17.—(AP)—The luck of the draw, plus the routine of seedings, Wednesday provided a set of comfortable workouts and little strenuous opposition for the stars in the opening matches of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships, starting next Monday.

Three American men and four women were seeded Tuesday for the singles in this tournament which the players call "the world championship of amateur tennis." Eleven other Americans are in the two fields, along with most of the world's outstanding players. And only a few of them were listed in Monday's draw for hard first-round matches.

Gardner Mulloy, the 40-year-old Miami, Fla., attorney who is the top-ranking American player and seeded fifth here, was drawn against another American, Malcolm Fox of Baltimore.

Philadelphia's Vic Seixas, the No. 2 seeded player and backbone of America's last two Davis Cup teams, will start off against a little-known Briton, V. R. J. Lee.

KINGSTON, R. I., June 17.—(AP)—Herb Maack, Bucknell football line coach for the past six years and 1941 gridiron captain at Columbia, Wednesday was appointed a physical education instructor at the University of Rhode Island.

LOCKER OF HONUS WAGNER IS SENT TO COOPERSTOWN

PITTSBURGH, June 17.—(AP)—Honus Wagner, considered by many to have been baseball's greatest shortstop, will be the first National League player to have his locker enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame museum.

Wagner's locker, where he used to hang his uniform as a player and coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was sent Wednesday to Cooperstown, N. Y., site of the shrine. It was sent at the request of Sid Keener, director of the Hall of Fame.

Although Wagner is the first National League player to win this honor, three American League stars — all New York Yankees — have won it. The lockers of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio are on display.

Wagner was one of the first men to be named to the Hall of Fame. In 21 seasons as a major leaguer he averaged .329 at the plate. He led the National League in batting eight years and hit over .300 in 17 straight seasons from 1897 to 1913.

been invaluable to us. And he's improving right along. True," Gene added, "he isn't hitting for much average (.222), but he's knocked in some very important runs."

Williams may be at second base Thursday night, when the Crackers launch a seven-game home stand, with Little Rock as the first foe. Mauch is still bothered by a stiff neck and was undecided, after an off day Wednesday, whether he would play. Taylor Phillips (7-5) will do the pitching, as the Crackers lay their record of not having lost a series at Poncey on the line.

A check of Williams' stick-work reveals, as Mauch mentioned, that Charlie has helped more at the plate than his average indicates.

Though he has collected only 26 hits in 117 at bats, Williams has slammed three homers, three triples and four doubles. One of his blows was a pinch-hit homer, taking the Lookout series—their first such success away from Poncey this season.

Without doubt, it was the most interesting trip of the campaign. Luke Appling's bean ball accusations livened up the Memphis series and the fireworks exploded in Chattanooga, when Mauch and ex-Cracker Gerry Lane mixed it up in the outfield before Monday's game.

Cubs Edge Pirates In 16th Frame, 5-4

Jackson Hit Ends Marathon, Gets Victory for Turk Lown

CHICAGO, June 17—Ransom Jackson's bases-loaded single ended a four-hour, 16-inning struggle with a 5-4 Chicago Cub victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday.

Rickey Pays Off No-Trade Bonus In Kiner Pact

CHICAGO, June 17—The Chicago Cubs presented their new star, Ralph Kiner, with a $5,000 check Wednesday—a bonus from his old team, the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Before Kiner joined the Cubs June 4, National League President Warren Giles required him to sign a new Pittsburgh contract eliminating a clause that guaranteed him $5,000 if he were sold or traded.

But President Branch Rickey of the Pirates honored the clause, anyhow. He asked the Cubs to deduct $5,000 from the sum paid to Pittsburgh in the deal (a reported $100,000) and give it to Kiner.

pull even at the fifth and eighth holes.

Miss Lesser had lost to Mrs. Pung, 6 and 4, in the semifinals of the '52 National Amateur at Portland, Ore., but it left her with no complex. She fired a 40-37-77 to Mrs. Pung's 41-37-78. Pat held a 1-up lead at nine and increased it to 3-up at 11 before Jackie collected herself and won 15 and 17.

Meanwhile, Atlanta's two favorite golfers—professional Louise Suggs and amateur Dorothy Kirby—kept alive their chances of making this tournament a replay of the 1947 meet when they met in the finals here at Capital City.

Miss Suggs, current National Open champ and heavy favorite to make this her fourth Western Open triumph, brushed past Tennessee State titlist, Marnie Polk of Chattanooga, 4 and 3.

Louise was in 38 to hold a bare 1-up lead but went to work on the back nine to win 12, 13 and 14 in a row, the last with an 18-foot putt for a birdie.

Kirby had it much easier than had been expected in disposing of young Jo Ann Prentice of Birmingham, Ala., 6 and 5. The Alabamian was spraying her shots and was never in contention.

Claire Doran, sharpshooting Cleveland, already established as a top amateur threat along with Kirby, fired past professional Marilyn Smith of Wichita, Kans., 6 and 4, with a one over women's par performance.

defeated Jim Hoak in the first round of the tournament.

Coe was under par for the fifth straight day, counting four practice rounds he played prior to Wednesday's opening match.

Broyles Plemons fired a three-under par 68 at Waycross to take the low honors in the annual Okefenokee Pro-Am event.

The pro-am first prize went to an Ocala, Fla., team of Plemons, Jim Williams, Henry Taylor, and Lynn Conrad. They had a four-man best ball of 59-13 strokes, under regulation figures.

Plemons' Valdosta team captured second place in the pro-am event also. His amateurs who cut him eight strokes were John Oliver, W. L. Goodloe Sr., and W. L. Goodloe Jr. They registered a 60.

Wednesday's pro-am tourney was a warm-up in preparation for the 72-hole medal play action which begins Thursday and continues through Sunday.

For the first time since its inauguration in the mid-thirties, the Inverness Invitational golf tourney opening at Toledo, Ohio, Thursday will be a straight 72-hole medal play event.

In the past it has been held on a best-ball system, with pairs of pros battling each other on a plus-minus scoring basis.

Favorite Doug Sanders and Harry Webb won their matches and will meet in a semifinal match of the Highland Country Club Invitational golf tournament at LaGrange Thursday morning.

The second championship flight semifinal match will pit Tom Parker and Bert Culpepper.

Finals will be played Thursday afternoon.

Gordon Huddleston, Maryville, Tenn., fired a one-under par 71 to take medalist honors in the Smoky Mountain Invitational Golf Tournament at Knoxville, Tenn.

Hobart Manley Jr. of Savannah, Ga., turned in a 74 in the one-day qualifying action.

Match play begins Thursday with Huddleston playing Tom Randall of Knoxville and Manley meeting W. L. Robinson of Knoxville.

Problem Girl, 19, Wins Over Southern Jury

GREENVILLE, Miss., June 17—(P)—"Little Audrey" Woods-Rybolt, shapely problem girl of the local lockup, won her freedom from a sympathetic jury today and bade a fast farewell to the Delta country.

A jury which had reported itself hopelessly deadlocked last night took only seven minutes in renewed deliberations to decide that the voluptuous 19-year-old was an innocent party to a burglary here last year.

Thus freed legally for the first time since she was sent to reform school in Indiana at the age of 12, Audrey was quickly put aboard a bus for her home in Indianapolis.

Police were obviously relieved when the bus pulled out. She had escaped custody three times since her first arrest in Mississippi, at least once to the embarrassment of the authorities.

"You just don't know how glad I am to get off," were Little Audrey's parting words as Police Chief C. A. Hollingsworth handed her a bus ticket and a few dollars pocket money. "I think I'll telephone my mother and she'll meet me at the bus station in Indianapolis."

A hat had been passed among court spectators for the girl's bus fare after her acquittal was announced.

Little Audrey testified that the burglars she took up with on a tour of the South convinced her they were rich hotel men. When they left her in their car while they did a "job," she said, they told her they were going for sandwiches or for someone to fix the motor.

The state asked that she be sent to the state cotton farm but her attorney pleaded for a "second chance for a girl gone wrong."

As she left, Little Audrey told reporters "now you can stop writing pieces in the paper about me." But other reporters were reported waiting for her bus from Memphis to Indianapolis. Among those not present at Little Audrey's departure was her husband, J. Y. Rybolt, who married her after she broke from jail and lost her to the police two hours after the ceremony. When he found out about Little Audrey he filed for an annulment.

Reds Held Seeking Diplomatic Swap With Greece

LONDON, June 17 (P)—Diplomatic informants said today Russia has made an offer to Greece to restore normal diplomatic relations by exchanging ambassadors.

If confirmed, this represents the third apparently conciliatory gesture to be directed toward three Southwestern European nations bound together in a defense alliance—Greece, Yugoslavia, and Turkey.

A Greek Embassy spokesman said he has heard unofficial reports of the Russian move, but he could not confirm it. The reports also were current in Turkey, where Greek Premier Alexander Papagos has arrived for a four-day official visit.

The Russians formally withdrew their ambassador from Athens in 1948 at the height of the civil war between Greek government forces and Communist guerrillas. Greece recalled her ambassador from Moscow in 1950. Since then diplomatic relations have been on a charge d'affaires level.

In recent gestures, Russia proposed to Yugoslavia that they resume full diplomatic relations by exchanging ambassadors and Marshal Tito's government agreed. The Kremlin also sent a note to Turkey renouncing long time territorial claims and base rights in the prized Dardanelles Straits and suggesting a revision of the nine-nation Montreux convention governing use of the strategic waterway. Earlier, the Soviets decided to re-establish full diplomatic relations with Austria by exchanging ambassadors.

Greek Foreign Minister Stephen Stephanopoulos told the Athens Parliament last month he is in touch with Russia in the hope of winning freedom for some 4,000 Greek war prisoners and hostages held in Iron Curtain countries since the civil war. Their release, he said, would "constitute the best evidence" of the Soviets' good intentions towards Greece.

Ridgway Pledges NATO His Aid

FON TAIN EBLEAU, France, June 17—(P)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway said today he will exert his best efforts for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization when he becomes chief of staff of the U. S. Army next month.

Speaking to 600 officers of six nations gathered to bid him farewell at headquarters of the Central European Command, he said his new job was "the greatest honor that can come to a U. S. soldier."

He praised the teamwork and loyalty of the Allied military command and added: "If that spirit is manifest in times of crisis—then our success is assured beyond any doubt."

GOP Not Party for All —Truman

KANSAS CITY, June 17—(AP)—Former President Truman said the Republican Party in the last four months "has demonstrated it's the party of special interests."

The former chief executive called reporters to his office in the Federal Reserve Bank Building here for what he termed "just about the first political statement I've made" since leaving office. The statement, made earlier, was released today.

ASKED OF PARTY

"I've been asked about the condition of the Democratic Party," Truman said.

"The Democratic Party is, and always has been, a going concern. It's the party of the people, not the party of special interests."

Asked to amplify, Truman said: "I don't think the statement needs amplification. Just read the record the last four months."

Truman said he had been asked what he proposed to do for the party.

IN THE RANKS

"I told them I would work in the ranks if they let me. I want to help. But I have no special privileges because I was President of the United States."

The former President said he had been asked whom he considered the leader of the Democratic Party.

"It's Adlai Stevenson, naturally, since he was the Democratic nominee."

Rep. Davis Enters Plea For Grandmothers' Day

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON, June 17—(AP)—Congress today took up a subject that can't help but have a wide appeal, the subject of another holiday.

A House Judiciary Committee heard an appeal for making every presidential inauguration day a no-work day.

It also heard requests for special days for teachers, grandmothers, the Constitution, the flag, Casimir Pulaski, prayer, children, interfaith, and Gettysburg Address, cancer education, the Louisiana Purchase, Haym Salomon, shut-ins, fathers, Abraham Lincoln and hill billy music.

In each case a congressman showed up to make a special plea.

Samples:
Rep. Doyle (D-Calif.), arguing for a resolution which would call for the President to name a commission to pick up a National Children's Day: "What becomes of the children of the nation, the nation becomes."

Rep. Davis (D-Ga.), in asking for the second Sunday of October as National Grandmothers' Day, gave the subcommittee a statement in which he said: "Grandmothers

Immigration Bill To Aid Refugees Stalls in Senate

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—Administration efforts to hurry along a bill to open the United States to an additional 240,000 immigrants in the next two years suffered a setback in the Senate today.

The Senate immigration subcommittee, at an unannounced meeting decided to hold further hearings on the measure, urged by President Eisenhower to aid refugees and relieve population pressures in Europe.

Sen. Watkins (R-Utah), the subcommittee chairman, previously said he hoped for favorable action on the legislation by his group before the end of the week.

Swede Crown Prince Given Kiss Guard

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 17—(AP)—Some women just won't let Sweden's seven-year-old Crown Prince Karl Gustav alone.

And so the story came out today that he now has a kiss guard, a royal servant posted near him at all times to fend off kissing ladies and to chase over-eager amateur photographers who find him exceptionally photogenic.

His nurse has had to tear the Prince away from half hysterical women.

Bandits Get $3,000 in Bank Holdup

FRANKLIN, Ark., June 17—(AP)—The Bank of Franklin today was looted of between $3,000 and $5,000 by two unmasked bandits who held up a 30-year-old woman cashier.

Roadblocks were set up around this tiny north Arkansas town as the bandits made their get-away in an old model car.

The cashier, Miss Vilma Foreman, who was alone in the bank at the time, said the bandits approached her teller's cage and handed her a sack at pistol point.

"Scoop it up and you won't get hurt," the bandits told her, pointing to the cash in the cage. Then she was ordered to open the vault.

The bandits "cleaned out" the vault and locked Miss Foreman inside. She made her escape from the vault a short time later when her pounding on the door caused it to open.

throughout our great land have a preferred spot in the hearts of our national legislators, and in the hearts of all of us."

Three dates got the backing of Rep. Keating (R-NY): the fourth Sunday in September as Interfaith Day, Nov. 19 as Dedication Day on the anniversary of the Gettysburg Address, and Oct. 11 as Pulaski Day.

Of Brig. Gen. Pulaski, a Pole who served in the Revolutionary War, Keating said: "He gave his life while fighting for American independence."

Another Revolutionary hero, though not as well known, came in for special mention by Rep. Multer (D-NY).

Multer said that Haym Salomon, a Jewish merchant, twice got in such difficulties that the British arrested him. His second escape came in handy, because he had been sentenced to hang.

But his enthusiasm never faltered. Multer said he gave his entire fortune, $640,000, to aid the struggling American cause, and then used his credit to obtain additional funds.

"He died penniless," Multer said. Under the conditions, Multer said, he thinks it might be well for this country to think about Haym Salomon once each year, on Jan. 6, the date on which he died in 1785.

Multer and Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R-Mo.) both plugged for making Jan. 20, 1947, and every four years thereafter, a legal holiday. That's when the President is inaugurated.

One argument for the resolution: more and more people will be hanging around their television sets every four years, so why not make it a holiday and be done with it?

Rep. Winstead (D-Miss) wanted May 26 of each year set aside as National Hill Billy Music Day. Winstead said he had introduced the bill by request, and, "Frankly, it seemed very silly to me."

McAdoo's Niece Held Suicide After Indictment

DOVER PLAINS, N. Y., June 17—(AP)—Mrs. Anne Brooks McAdoo Serge, 51, niece of a former secretary of the treasury under indictment on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government in an income tax scheme, was found dead, officially declared a suicide, in her automobile near here today.

Mrs. Serge, a niece of the late William Gibbs McAdoo, was to have appeared in federal court in New York today for arraignment on an indictment charging she and 40 others conspired to defraud the government in a scheme which allegedly mulcted the Federal Treasury of $70,000.

Dr. Edward L. Cotter, Dutchess County medical examiner, said she had killed herself.

The body was discovered in her car at Chestnut Ridge, a small settlement near here, where she was having a house built.

A hole had been punched in the rear window of the car, and a hose led from the exhaust pipe through the window into the automobile.

Dr. Cotter said Mrs. Serge also had slashed her left wrist. He said she apparently had been dead since about 9 p. m. Sunday.

The indictment against Mrs. Serge was returned by a grand jury in New York City June 4.

At that time Assistant U. S. Attorney Albert Blinder said Mrs. Serge, former chief auditing clerk in an internal revenue collector's office in Manhattan, was one of the originators and principal participants in the alleged fraud.

He said the defendants filed false tax refund claims for ap-

Rep. Bramblett

Solon Indicted on Charges Of Lying on Kickbacks

WASHINGTON, June 17—(UP)—Representative Bramblett was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury today on charges he lied to the House about $4,036 he allegedly received in salary "kickbacks" from two congressional women employees.

The California Republican was charged with 18 counts of making false statements to the House disbursing office in connection with the salaries of Mrs. Olga Hardaway of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Mrs. Margaret M. Swanson of Arlington, Va.

Bramblett said at his office that "I haven't anything to say" and referred reporters to his attorney.

Eleven of the counts charged Bramblett with lying about the payroll status of Mrs. Hardaway and about $736 in checks made out to her. The grand jury said Mrs. Hardaway endorsed the checks and returned them to the congressman.

The seven other counts accused Bramblett of making false statements about checks made out to Mrs. Swanson for $3,300. It said the checks were credited to her bank account but the funds later were withdrawn and turned over to Bramblett.

Bramblett, a former school official in Pacific Grove, Calif., faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for each of the 18 counts if convicted.

The grand jury, which had heard 15 witnesses since it began its investigation of Bramblett's payroll activities May 28, said the violations occurred between December, 1950, and April, 1951.

House Votes $4 Billion in VA Funds

Free Treatment Rules Tightened

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The House tentatively approved today a bill appropriating $5,284,269,664 for the Veterans Administration and three other agencies and making free hospitalization for nonservice ailments more difficult to obtain.

House members followed to the penny the money recommendations of their appropriations committee, which cut $1,171,389,000 from original Truman fund requests and $328,000,000 from the revised Eisenhower budget.

PASSAGE DELAYED

Actual passage was put off until tomorrow because of an agreement that there would be no roll-call voting today.

Pending is a motion to send the bill back to the appropriations committee with instructions to knock out a provision aimed at curbing free hospitalization for nonservice disabilities.

In addition to the Veterans Administration, the bill finances the Atomic Energy Commission, the Tennessee Valley System for the fiscal year starting July 1.

HOW IT'S SPLIT

Here's how it splits up the money:

Veterans Administration: $4,008,335,264; former President Truman sought $4,574,240,664 and President Eisenhower asked $4,295,046,664. Biggest cut was $300,000,000 from compensation and pension payments, but this may be restored in full or in part later. For maintenance and operation of veterans' hospitals, the bill exceeds Truman requests by $6,000,000 and Eisenhower estimates by $31,000,000.

Atomic Energy Commission: $1,057,781,000; Truman sought $1,592,789,000 and Eisenhower $1,096,000,000.

TVA FIGURES

Tennessee Valley Authority: $188,371,000; Truman sought $254,335,000 and Eisenhower $190,922,000. The House upheld its committee's denial of $30,000,000 dollars to build a steam generating plant at Fulton, Tenn., and approved $17,800,000 for additions to generating plants at Kingston and John Sevier, Tenn. It sustained a ban against moving TVA headquarters from Knoxville, Tenn., to Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Selective Service System: $29,882,400; Truman wanted $34,400,000 and Eisenhower $29,200,000.

The House fought most of the day over proposed curtailment of veterans' benefits, particularly the free hospitalization for ex-GI's whose disabilities didn't result from their service.

EXISTING LAW

Existing law provides that any veteran can go to a veterans' hospital and obtain treatment for a non-service ailment if he swears he can't afford to pay and there's a bed available. The Veterans' Administration must accept these affidavits at face value.

The appropriations committee, claiming there have been widespread abuses, proposed that the Veterans' Administration be permitted to check on the affidavits. In case of doubt, and require the veteran to pay to the extent of his ability.

Voluntary Prisoner Freed By Death at 100-Yr. Mark

FT. SMITH, Ark., June 17.—Only death could remove William Washington Spencer from his Sebastian County jail cell where he had spent almost half of his life without charge.

But it was the aged Negro's own choice.

"Spence," whose age was thought to be between 100 and 105, first entered the jail in 1904 on a charge that has long been forgotten. He was acquitted but had learned to like the life in jail and asked the late sheriff Lon Norris to let him stay on.

And ever since, the succeeding county sheriffs had Spence as a free boarder.

During his time in jail the Negro was free to come and go as he pleased and often helped with unruly Negro prisoners.

A county judge in 1939 ordered Spence removed from jail but the sheriff billed the county for the Negro's upkeep at a private home and the judge gave up in despair. Spence went back to jail after 30 days' "freedom."

No one, not even Spence himself, knew exactly how old he was. He told a reporter years ago that he was born in slavery in Louisiana in the early 1850's and could remember his slave father going off with their master to the Civil War.

He said he also remembered his father returning to the plantation with the body of his master who had been killed at Vicksburg.

Spence said he came to Arkansas in the early 1880's to work in a lumber camp and then came here about 1895.

When Sebastian County opened a new jail in 1937, Spence was the first to enter and take his choice

Hospital Cuts Called Vicious by Ga. Vets

By RICHARD ASHWORTH

Georgia's Veterans of Foreign Wars are "hopping mad" over what they term "vicious" cuts in congressional appropriations for VA hospitals and veterans medical care, the state VFW commander said here Wednesday.

Asa D. Kelley Jr. of Albany, the state commander, said the appropriations cuts would be the hottest point of discussion at the 11th annual encampment of the Georgia Department of VFW which gets underway in Atlanta Thursday at the Biltmore Hotel.

Kelley said a resolution has already been prepared—and will probably pass the expected 1,500 state delegates—condemning the actions of Rep. John Phillips (Rep., Calif.) for his attacks on hospital appropriations of the VA. "We still have 500 mental patients at the state hospital at Milledgeville, all of whom are eligible for treatment at VA hospitals, but cannot get it because there are no beds in a hospital adequately staffed to care for them," he charged.

This situation exists, he pointed out, even though there are 600 vacant beds at the VA hospital at Dublin.

Merton B. Tice of Mitchell, S. D., national junior vice-commander in chief of the VFW, who will speak at the encampment at 2:30 p. m. Friday, said the hospital funds issue will be also "number one" on the national convention agenda.

Tice said the VFW is prepared to wage a Congressional floor fight to restore the cuts, with Rep. James A. Van Zandt (Rep., Pa.), Rep. Olin Teague (Dem., Texas), and Rep. Pat Carney of New York leading the House fight.

On the state level, Kelley said the Georgia VFW group will be asked to consider resolutions adopting the uniform safety code in full; co-ordinating civil defense activities of VFW posts with the state civil defense organization;

Trailer Output Climbs

NEW YORK—The house-trailer industry in the United States produced about 83,000 vehicles in 1952, or 25 per cent more trailers than the 67,000 turned out in 1951. An average of 15,000 a year were sold before World War II.

Quarterly Foreign Aid Is Highest Since 1947

Friendly Foreign Nations
Get 20 Pct. for Arms-Building

By CHARLES E. EGAN

WASHINGTON, June 17.—This year's first quarter expenditures for military and economic aid to other nations were higher than those of any quarter in more than five years, according to figures the Department of Commerce will announce shortly. Outlays, it was learned, topped $1,800,000,000, most of it for military expenditures made necessary by the international situation.

According to surveys, nearly 70 per cent of all expenditures for foreign aid during the first months of the Eisenhower administration went for military help to friendly foreign nations. In the first quarter of 1950 economic aid accounted for about $1,000,000,000 of assistance whereas it now comprises only about $500,000,000 of a total expenditure of better than $1,800,000,000.

Analysis of the foreign aid figures show that for the second consecutive quarter, military assistance exceeded the economic and technical assistance expenditures.

A declining trend in economic aid and technical assistance was perceptible through the quarter which showed a decline of 10 per cent compared with the corresponding quarter of 1952. The President's backing of a trade-not-aid policy was credited with exerting a major influence on the economic aid figures.

Increased foreign aid expenditures for the first quarter were the largest since July, August and September of 1947 when the British government, attempting to live up to currency convertibility provisions of its $3,750,000,000 loan agreement with this country, was forced to draw approximately $750,000,000 a month to meet outstanding gold balances. The drain became so heavy upon the British economy that the London government was forced to call a halt in converting foreign currency credits into gold.

The heavy spending in the third quarter of 1947 was principally because of the loans to the British and contributions to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

People Still Bet On Horses

By YOLANDE GWIN

Horse sense is what keeps horses from betting on people. Ah, but the people... they were betting on the performances of their mounts early Wednesday as they gathered around the paddock at Chastain Memorial Park in preparation for the opening of the Greater Atlanta Shrine Horse Show which got under way Wednesday night.

Officials estimate that more than $2,000,000 worth of horses and equipment will be on parade.

DRAPED IN VELVET

Tack rooms, colorful and pretty, were meeting places for many riders as well as exhibitors. A case in point was the Jack Boyd Stable from Simpsonville, S. C.

The interior of the tack room was entirely draped with dark red velvet with touches of white giving a sharp contrast. A horse collar painted an antique red served as a frame for a mirror, while red and white metal jockeys formed base and stands for table lamps.

UNBIASED OPINION

Colors of the various exhibitors fluttered in the welcome sunshine which at noon time had about dried the rain-soaked main show ring. A carnival atmosphere was in evidence as refreshment stands did big business and barkers sold souvenirs, pop corn and peanuts.

One of the most interested spectators in the exhibitors' area was Miss Kay Kranz of Denver, Colo. She was also about the only person in the section with an unbiased opinion on the horses. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Kranz, she was visiting the show on a shopping tour for a gaited mare.

Career Girls Outing

The country home of Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, "Lob-lolly," will be the setting for the annual outing of the Atlanta Business and Professional Women's Club on Wednesday, June 24.

Miss Ruth Weller Elder, Rev. James Vaught Are Wed

Preceded by her bridesmaids wearing frocks of pastel blue tulle offset with bouquets of yellow roses, Miss Ruth Weller Elder ascended the aisle of All Saints Episcopal Church Wednesday evening to become the bride of the Rev. James B. Vaught, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Leroy Vaught of Atlanta.

Bishop Randolph Claiborne, assisted by the Rev. Milton Wood, officiated at the nuptial service which was followed by an elaborate reception given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Elder, at their home on Muscogee Ave.

Mr. Elder gave his daughter in marriage. She chose an exquisite gown combining a bodice of Alencon lace over white satin and a bouffant skirt of tulle which swept into a slight train. Her finger-tip veil of tulle was attached to a cap of matching lace, and she carried a white prayer book which was used by the bridegroom's mother at her marriage. A cluster of white orchids adorned the book.

Miss Marion Smith was maid of honor, and bridesmaids included Miss Joan Gilliam of Columbus, Ohio. Mrs. Kenneth Klein, Mrs. William Grabbe of Birmingham and Miss Joan Hale of Tampa.

The Rev. Marshall Ellis of Griffin was best man for Mr. Vaught, and serving as ushers were Brewster Stribling, H. Lee Bowen, John W. Vaught and Gerald Claffie of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Vaught and his bride left for a six-week honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains. Upon their return they will reside in Atlanta. Mr. Vaught will assume his duties as rector of the Church of Holy Innocents.

Miss Gibbs Is Married

Miss Roberta Gibbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John N. Gibbs, was married to Claude Eugene Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Simmons of Fairburn, at the Cascade Road Presbyterian Church with Dr. Archie C. Ray officiating.

Miss Betty Gibbs was her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Pat Ray was bridesmaid. Raynard Dalley served as best man.

The bride wore a gown of white net and lace over taffeta, with an illusion veil attached to a tiara of orange blossoms and seed pearls. She carried a prayer book topped with white orchids.

The bride's parents gave a reception at their home on Boulevard Granada. Miss Joan Bauman kept the bride's book.

After their wedding trip, Mr. Simmons will return to his Air Force duties in London, England. His bride will follow later.

Mother's Place Is Home With Baby

By MARCIA WINN

A Shetland pony and her colt moved into our neighborhood recently. The mother is gentle, affectionate, and docile, but wherever she goes her colt must go, too. Otherwise she becomes frantic.

As long as the colt is beside her, the mother is calm and at ease, but when he is gone, her ears twitch nervously, her eyes roll, and she begins to get frantic. For his part the colt gets clearly hysterical when separated.

This companionship, so lovely to watch, is here cited for a reason. Every working mother expecting a baby, who thinks she will continue working for the baby's first two or three years "until things aren't quite so tough financially," should watch this mother and child. "Two ponies," she may scoff. "What have they to do with me?" Only this: That if she returns to work when her baby is, say, six weeks old, she will never be wholly at ease. Her heart will always be behind her with the baby she has instructed to someone else.

When she goes home each night, it always will be with worry. Is the baby safe? Is he well? Does that nurse really love him? Is she sweet to him? Does the baby like her?

All through the day at work these grave matters will have been tugging at her mind. At night she will try to double up on attention (to a baby who at night needs only sleep) to make up for her absence during the day.

Quite aside from the injustice to herself—in that she is losing the close joy of helping and watching her baby grow—and the injustice to her employer, because a house divided cannot stand, there is the grave injustice to her baby. No other woman can love a baby in quite the same fashion as its mother. Others' feeling for the baby may be extraordinarily deep, but it is never the same.

Sometimes a mother must work to feed her baby. She works from necessity and with a heavy heart. A few states, among them Illinois, provide financial aid to such mothers to enable them to stay with their children. More often, however, the mother was working to give him "advantages."

The greatest advantage you can give him, one that will endure through life, is your own loving presence during what are called the formative years, those up to the age of 5. No baby misses luxuries. He does miss his mother.

Husband's Cooperation Aids Dieter

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Success or failure in reducing depends largely on how you think and feel about this business of taking off weight—with or without the moral support of the family.

SHE IS WILLING

One overweight seriously doubts that she can stay on a diet. It's not that she isn't willing, but she has tried so many times and after about two weeks always goes back to the old fattening ways of eating. Her husband, having been through these sessions before, is mildly derisive of her attempts to diet. That adds to her own doubts and weakens her will power.

Since no one likes to fail at anything — she then rationalizes that weight runs in her family anyway and that it's foolish to try to go against nature—none of which is true, but somehow seems comforting.

HEALTH IMPROVED

Now our other overweight with a like 30 pounds to lose goes on a diet. The doctor has suggested that reducing would improve her health and restore her former zip and zest.

She has talked it over with her husband and he has offered to co-operate by going without his accustomed desserts at dinner, thereby giving her his vote of confidence. When the most important person in your life has faith that you can and will reduce—that bolsters resolve.

Canned Beans Are Topped With Apple Sauce in Bologna

Baked Beans Are Special For Outdoor Summer Meals

By JEANNE HIGGINS

For patio, porch or back yard eating, this is a come-and-get-it special. Canned baked beans are topped with Canadian bacon or bologna cornucopias, filled with a tangy apple sauce mixture, and browned in the oven.

Glasses of ice-cold canned tomato juice, with an added dash of Worcestershire sauce or lemon juice, make the perfect refreshing beverage for any summer meal.

So, if it's too warm to eat inside, why not make an easy casserole like this baked bean special and treat the family to supper on the porch? It's a dish tailor-made for outdoor dining.

Celestine Sibley 'Dither' Days For Macon

They tell me the people in Macon are in a dither over Margaret Long's new book, "Affair of the Heart." Like book readers from time immemorial, they are very busy recognizing themselves and their friends as the characters in the novel, although Margaret plainly says that the place is not Macon, Ga., but Fort Mary, Ga., and the people all have names and natures which she made up out of her own splendid imagination.

I, for one, don't blame the people in Macon for their feeling that the characters in "Affair of the Heart" are real. They are, like everything Margaret Long ever wrote, as real, as true as life itself. If you remember "Louisville Saturday," you know with what wondrous sensitivity and validity Margaret works.

Although I couldn't pick out any specific people as the real-life prototypes of some of the less attractive characters in "Affair of the Heart," I have known many of them. Random House, the publishers, put on the jacket that the book tells the "passionate story of two estranged lovers portrayed against a background of violence in a small Southern town"—a tag which may sell books to all the droves of people who dote on violence in small Southern towns, but it strikes me as a paltry summation of the bigger, better story which Margaret has to tell.

There are lovers in the book, many of them. Not just Carter, the newspaper woman who comes home to Fort Mary after the collapse of her marriage in New York, and not just Lorin Kelly, Carter's husband, who doesn't really show up until toward the end of the book, but all of them, Eve, the smart, attractive young woman who fights alcoholism; her husband, Ben, who blunderingly tries to help her and only hurts her worse; Doris, the married Negro woman who is troubled by the bigotry ways of the daughter she struggled to educate; Lizzie and Big Willie, Duke and Clarabell, struggling with such heroism in the face of odds so big they can't even recognize them; clever, pretty Doris, the railroad man's daughter, and Terry, the ambitious young man who loves her but not enough.

There's hardly a person in the book that I didn't meet with happy recognition. The efforts of the young liberals in town to right some of the wrongs and to give a hand to Negroes struggling for a foothold on the plateau of real citizenship gives the book its shape and movement and incidentally tells a story which is being lived in towns all over the South. People like these in "Affair of the Heart" are everywhere about us but Margaret Long makes you see afresh their courage, their fine, stumbling courage. She makes you mighty proud of the good ones you know, gives you pity for the selfish and wicked ones and, all in all, presents far the most accurate, yet affectionate, picture of a small Southern town that I have seen.

Even the casual characters in the book are priceless. There's a man named Ellery Garrett, a college professor, I think, who shows up briefly in a City Hall meeting where Negroes demand a swimming pool for their children. But I know him well from Carter's description of him to Eve and so do you.

"Liberal and only ostensibly Baptist and moderately nigger-loving, a devotee of gradualism. Very conscientious reader and understands some of them. He's earnest about the Pender art exhibitions and the Concert Association, too. But, Eve, he says 'implement' instead of 'do,' and every utterance has to be in a 'frame of reference.' And nothing is ever here or there, it's on this or that 'level.'"

Know the people in "Affair of the Heart"? Of course you do. They're all around us.

Mrs. Taylor, Albert Perkins Are Married

Mrs. Annie C. Burch announces the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn E. Taylor, to Albert Luther Perkins, which took place in Jonesboro.

The bride wore an aqua ensemble with a cluster of gardenias. She is associated in business with R. B. Camp Co.

Mr. Perkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Perkins, is in the construction business. He and his bride are residing in Sylvan Hills.

DAILY GUIDE—We will need to get down to facts now. Lots of ideas and some written and oral promises will need to be examined carefully at this time. This is when it is necessary to be realistic and practical. Don't be self-deceived, and naturally, don't think you can deceive others. What is planted is very important, what is said or done now is of grave concern. If you happen to be one of those born around the middle of October, July, January or April, be especially careful to take off your rose-colored spectacles, and put on bifocals so you can see what goes on the surface and what is hidden.

Happy Birthday, Gemini! Things are looking up. The past month should have brought greater activity, and now you will need to watch finances, as some unexpected event can bring an upset. This should turn out to be a most fortunate year for you if you do your part to improve opportunities. Social activities, romance or interest in young people are possible developments. In October your affairs take a spurt and then after that you may find it necessary to concentrate on routine work.

EAT WHAT I LIKE Follow Anaro Recipe—Reduce

ROCKMART, GA.—"I would like to tell everyone just what Anaro Concentrate has done for me. I have never found any other way to lose weight and still feel good. I am thankful I bought the first bottle of Anaro. I found that by following this safe home recipe I did not have to give up the food I liked and yet was still able to reduce. Dieting just would not work for me as I would get weak and have dizzy spells and headaches. I have lost 30 lbs. since taking Anaro and never been hungry."

WEDS ATLANTAN
Mrs. Richard A. Scott

Davis-Scott Vows Taken In Oklahoma

At the First Baptist Church of Norman, Okla., Miss Virginia Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Davis of Norman, became the bride of Richard Allen Scott, son of Mrs. Carolyn L. Scott of Atlanta. The Rev. E. F. Hallock officiated.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and Chantilly lace with a fingertip veil attached to a pearl-trimmed cap. She carried a white Bible adorned with white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Robert W. White was her sister's matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Misses Earla Ann Melott, Barbara Bryant, Patricia Taylor and Mettie Bell Carter.

Robert W. White was best man for his brother-in-law, and ushers were Don Staton, Paul Stamps, Jimmie White and Charles White.

Sheri Haynes was flower girl and Bob White served as ringbearer.

Courts, Cooledge Vows Said

Wearing an exquisite gown of blush satin and Brussels lace, Miss Elaine Courts ascended the aisle of St. Luke's Episcopal Church Wednesday evening to become the bride of Norman Aurelian Coledge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman P. Cooledge, at one of the fashionable ceremonies of the season. Dr. Allen Albert was the officiant.

Escorted by her father, Macon C. Courts, the bride wore a veil of blush illusion which cascaded from a Juliet cap of Brussels lace and extended to cover her satin train. Her prayer book was adorned with valley lilies and sweetheart roses, and her only jewelry was a diamond cross loaned her by Mrs. Sam Weyman.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Courts entertained at a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Miss Florence Carter was the bride's maid of honor, and Mrs. George McDuffie, the bridegroom's sister, was matron of honor. Her bridesmaids were Misses Mary Wayne, Tatty Matthews, Lamar Ellis, Jan Perdue, Betty Walker, Mrs. William Parker Jr., Mrs. Robert Martin and Mrs. George Wright.

Robert L. Foreman Jr., served as best man for Mr. Cooledge, and acting as usher - groomsmen were Thomas E. Schneider Jr., William Huger Jr., Bernard Neal, William Parker Jr., George McDuffie, Richard Courts III, John Cooledge, Crawford Sites and John Grant Jr.

Elizabeth Smith, a small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith Jr., was flower girl. Miss Margaret Ellis and Miss Claire Hardwick kept the bride's book at the reception.

Mr. Cooledge and his bride left for a honeymoon at an undisclosed destination. They will reside at the Castle Pines Apartments.

Annie Lou Hardy Vassar Roommate To Visit Miss Martin

An attractive New Yorker arriving Sunday is Miss Joan Comfort, who will be the guest of her Vassar roommate, Miss Trudy Martin, at the Blackland Rd. home of the latter's parents, Dr. and Mrs. William O. Martin Jr.

Another visitor arriving June 25 at the Martin home is Miss Kay Tarrant of Louisville, Ky., who will be the guest of Miss Jane Martin.

On July 1, Mrs. Martin, her daughters and their guests will leave for Sea Island, where the Martins have taken one of the Cloister cottages for a month.

LEAVING FOR SEA ISLAND today are Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Smith, their sister, Miss Judy King, and their children, Ben Jr. and Eleanor, who will be guests for some time at Miss King's beach home.

Ben Jr. will have as his guests at the beach Buffy Seydel of Atlanta and his classmate, Jack Finley of Memphis, with whom he graduated June 10 from Culver Military Academy.

OTHER ATLANTANS leaving for Sea Island July 1 are Mrs. Dave Ison Jr. and her children, Dave III, Diane, Barbara, Vicki and Janice, who will also occupy a Cloister cottage for a month. Mr. Ison will join his family for the week ends.

Joining the Isons on July 3 for 10 days will be Helen Hallum, who will visit Diane, and Jack Rooker, who will be the guest of Dave III.

AFTER TWO MONTHS of touring Europe, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Ragan landed Tuesday in New York from aboard the Queen Elizabeth. They returned Wednesday to their home on Inman Circle.

MR. AND MRS. CARLYLE FRASER left Wednesday by plane for Montreal, Canada. After a week's stay there, Mr. Fraser will

TAKES OFFICE
Frank O. Evans

Evans Takes Oath in Rites At Macon

MACON, June 17 (P)—Frank O. Evans of Milledgeville today took the oath of office as U. S. attorney for the Middle District of Georgia, the first major patronage job in Georgia outside post offices to be filled by the Republican administration.

Jack J. Gautier was presented to the court by Evans immediately after the new district attorney took the oath and was then sworn in as first assistant district attorney. Gautier has served as district attorney under an interim appointment since John P. Cowart resigned last November to become clerk of the court. He had served as first assistant under Cowart.

Following the ceremony before Judges T. Hoyt Davis and A. B. Conger, Evans said he plans "no immediate changes" in other assistants in the district attorney's jobs. Evans made no announcement concerning an additional assistant district attorney but there were reports that a post he being created to give the district attorney a fourth assistant. Floyd Buford and Joe Davis are the other assistants.

Judge Davis presided over the special court session attended by approximately 250 persons who crowded into the small courtroom in the Federal Building here. Other court officials and workers in court offices, many lawyers, local officials, Republican leaders and personal friends and relatives of Evans were among those present.

79 Seeking Revenue Job In Late Rush

A $10,800 Georgia federal job that almost was going begging a week ago now is being sought by at least 79 persons.

Last week the regional office of the Civil Service Commission reported only eight applicants had filed for the post of assistant director of internal revenue for Georgia, with the deadline only a few days away.

This word was spread far and wide by newspapers, radio and TV. The result was a deluge of applications right up to the deadline Monday. Applications from 79 have been accepted and an 80th man may be admitted if he can establish that his letter reached the commission office in time but was, as he contends, returned for lack of postage.

A commission spokesman said an examination of the applications will begin at once and those of obviously unqualified persons will be discarded. The remainder then will be interviewed and still more will be eliminated.

Those still left will be investigated carefully and the names of the top three candidates will be forwarded to Washington to the national commissioner.

Although the commissioner is the appointing power, it is presumed that Wright Holland, recently appointed to the $12,000 director's job, will be consulted on the final decision.

Fort Valley Pastor Leads Oliver Meet

Constitution State News Service
FORT VALLEY, June 17—The Rev. Norman E. Hodges, new pastor of the Fort Valley Baptist Church, is conducting a series of meetings at Oliver, Ga., the minister's home town.

Dr. Aquila Chamlee conducted the Wednesday prayer service at the Fort Valley church in the absence of the pastor.

AF Reserve Posts Open

Former Air Force reserve officers who declined their permanent commissions earlier this year are now eligible for a new appointment.

The announcement, made Wednesday by Maj. Gen. Charles E. Thomas Jr., commanding general, 14th Air Force at Robins Air Force Base, said former reserve officers who apply for a new commission must meet Air Force Standards for direct appointments, and applications for extended active duty, normally required, will be waived.

In considering applications, records of reserve officers will be checked to insure they did not decline their previous tender of appointment to avoid overseas or other hazardous duty, the Air Force said.

Former reservists who desire to be considered may submit applications to the Commanding General, Headquarters, 14th Air Force, Robins Air Force Base, Ga. Further information may be obtained by calling Headquarters 9181 Volunteer Air Reserve Group in Atlanta at EL 3311.

Playground Lantern Parade, Floats To Bring Crowd to Piedmont Park

Against a backdrop of lighted water floats on Piedmont Lake, some 500 youngsters from 30 playgrounds will march in Atlanta's annual lantern parade at 8:30 p. m. Thursday at Piedmont Park.

Fourteen floats, each illustrating in colorful fashion a different theme, will be drawn across the lake while the lantern parade of youngsters in bright costumes proceeds around the lake.

The parade will end on the park's ball diamonds where two girls' teams—Lorelei Ladies and Tom Boys—will play softball.

Miss Virginia Carmichael, director of the recreation division of the parks department, sponsor of the event, promises the spectacle will be the "best, most colorful and most festive celebration ever staged by the department." She invites Atlantans to view the parade.

LOBBY REHEARSAL

Open-Air Show Holds 1st Practice

By BILL DIEHL
Atlanta's Municipal Theater-Under-The-Stars took its first tottering steps Tuesday night in the lobby of the Tower Theater where a group of professional and amateur singers began tuning up for the first production in July.
But even in its swaddling stages, the theater's future looked bright, young and energetic and held promise of the spectacles that the theater people hope to develop.
Small groups of singers and dancers gathered in the wings, on stage and in the foyers and lobby to start working the kinks out of their legs and their tonsils. There were no big stars around. Just the hard-working chorus line and choral groups.
But then they are the backbone of any show. They are the regulars—the ones who will go on every night during the summer season. The ones who will learn the routines and give meaning to performances by Broadway headlines who will sing the leading roles in the five productions planned during July and August.
There were a few drawbacks in this first practice session. The ballet pianist speared her finger with a pair of shears and Margaret Fambrough, who will direct the chorus, had to sit in as musician for the budding chorus line.

ASPIRANTS BEGIN THEATER-UNDER-STARS WORK

The ballerinas of Theater-Under-The-Stars are perhaps the youngest and most excited of all. They range in age from 15 to 22 and all have worked either on television shows, in the Southern or Atlanta Civic Ballets or in club dates around the city. Miss Dolly Nigemeyer, dance director, said she was "well pleased" with the potential.

'Samaritan' Robbery Term 8-12 Years

A pallid, shaking mechanic was sentenced Wednesday to 8-to-12 years in jail in the pistol-point robbery of the Good Samaritan who gave him a lift in a car.
Attorneys for the mechanic, James Calvin Agan, 25, claimed he was insane, but a superior court jury deliberated only 25 minutes before finding him guilty of armed robbery.
The robbery netted him $14 and a battered leather wallet, witnesses said.
The victim, J. A. Meier, 1635 Pontiac Pl., S. E., said he met Agan in a roadside tavern and that Agan asked him for a ride home.
Meier said he agreed and they started driving.
"As we drove out Pryor Rd.," Meier swore, "Agan directed me to turn into a dead-end street. Then he reached in his pocket and pulled out a pistol."
Meier said he was forced to throw his wallet, which was empty, and $14 in cash, on the seat. He said later Agan tried to shoot him but the gun misfired.

1st Quarter Business Shows Gain

Debits and Credits Top '52 Period

Georgia business boomed along during the first quarter of 1953 at a high level of activity, according to a quarterly summary released Wednesday by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Merrill C. Lofton in issuing the quarterly report said:

Debits and loans in Federal Reserve member banks advanced materially over the first quarter of 1952, transactions were up in the trade field, more new businesses were incorporated, substantial increases were found in the number of telephones in operation, and manufacturing employment had risen.

COMPOSITE REPORT

The report, representing a composite of data supplied by Federal agencies and private sources, reflected a sharp increase in number of unemployed and increase in the production of electric energy for industrial and utility purposes.

Urban construction, in recent periods in a slump due to government controls and other exigencies, was again on the up-grade in the first quarter of 1953. Freight transportation in the area showed gains, substantial among the airlines, and some stepped up activity occurred in the textile industry.

Only one or two "dark spots" were seen in the otherwise good business picture. Cash farm income was off sharply in the state in the first two months, and world trade continued to drop sharply in the first quarter.

DEPOSITS INCREASE

Taking up each segment of the state's economy, Lofton reported deposits in Federal Reserve member banks were up 2.4 per cent from $1,254,000,000 in the first quarter of last year to $1,286,500,000 this year—and loans advanced 14.5 per cent, or from $256,500,000 to $292,800,000. Debits increased five per cent from $4,835,000,000 to $5,084,400,000.

Retail trade rose from 1 per cent in Savannah to 13 per cent in Atlanta and wholesale trade was up four per cent.

New business incorporations increased 4.7 per cent, the number of business and residential phones in operation was up 6.6 and 7.3 per cent respectively, and manufacturing employment showed a rise of 2.7 per cent, or from 301,300 to 309,500 workers.

The average number of weekly insured unemployed in the state dropped 6.3 per cent, or from 16,000 to 15,000, urban building rose from $36,860,000 to $44,854,000, or 21.7 per cent for the state as a whole. Electric energy produced was 6.7 per cent greater.

In most instances, advances shown in Georgia business were in line with increases in the Southeast and in the nation as a whole.

Paper Bathing Suit Said To Be Safe, Cute

NEW YORK, June 17—(AP)—Want to go swimming in a paper bathing suit?

You can do just that, and suffer no embarrassment, American Cyanamid Co. reported today, if your swimsuit has been treated with a chemical compound that makes paper strong when wet.

Addition of a melamine resin called "melostrength" makes wet paper just as strong as dry paper and promises revolutionary developments, particularly in the packaging field, company spokesmen said.

Besides paper bathing suits, the new process which was developed by Cyanamid and will be made available to other chemical companies under license agreements makes possible the marketing of such items as paper rain capes, paper pillow cases, paper blanket covers and bed pads, paper kitchen aprons and baby bibs, molded paper baby carriages, duck decoys and flowerpots and paper auto seat covers, the company said.

Cotton Trade Session Dull

NEW YORK, June 17—(AP)—Cotton futures closed 15 cents a bale lower to 25 cents today. It was another dull session and traders found few fresh incentives in the cotton picture.

They were also uncertain over the nearby July situation, with first notice day coming up next Wednesday.

Dealers reported that demand for cotton textiles was confined to small orders for nearby delivery.

Mill demand for futures was mostly scale down today. Switching from nearby July to later months was fairly active. A leading spot firm bought about 7,500 bales of July contracts, according to ring estimates, partly against sales of new crop positions. The Census Bureau report, placing May cotton consumption at 747,789 running bales, was about in line with trade expectations. Consumption for the first 10 months of the crop season, August-May, was 190,889 bales larger than in the same period a year ago. Scattered showers were reported in the Southeast and they were favorable for the cotton crop.

Surgery Aids Girl, 15, Shot 8 Months Ago

Margie Irene Ousley, 15-year-old Clayton County girl who was the victim of a shooting last October, was reported in fair condition at Grady Hospital Wednesday where she underwent surgery for complications growing out of the gun wound.

According to police records of the October shooting, Miss Ousley and four others were wounded by shotgun blasts fired from an automobile near her home at Riverdale.

Clayton County police arrested Ed Hand, a farmer, and his sons, Fred and Carl, shortly after the shooting and all three were charged with assault with intent to murder, records show.

Tanks Rout Crowd

But the people didn't realize it was a phony demonstration. They took it up in earnest. Thousands besieged the government offices Wednesday. East German Communist police, trained and equipped like a army, didn't act like one. It took Russian tanks and machine-gunning armored cars to rout the crowd.

Meantime, rioting had spread like wildfire into the Eastern zone. The Germans were telling the world that no matter how much Russia claimed to represent its workers, it wasn't true of them. "We Want Freedom," and "Free Elections for a Unified Germany." Those were the slogans.

Already a few days before, the rapping on the Iron Curtain had been heard from Czechoslovakia, where similar work and economic conditions also had produced riots. Faint and not clearly identifiable noises came from Bulgaria.

Something had happened to the iron grip which the Stalin regime had held on the satellites.

Faint symptoms of the illness which Western diplomats had long expected of the weakness which is one day to topple the Communist empire, were beginning to appear, and with it the threat of extreme violence.

Enslaved East Europe Beats on Iron Curtain

By J. M. ROBERTS JR.

The entombed peoples of Eastern Europe have begun to beat against the Iron Curtain, rapping out a message to the rest of the world that they had rather face Russian guns than remain enslaved.

The message was a stirring one, but with somber undertones involving the peace of the world. It came suddenly from East Berlin like a hammer blow at Russian hopes of using German politics to enhance her own position in Europe.

As a part of their new campaign of sweetness and light, the Communists arranged a controlled workers demonstration in Berlin Tuesday, letting marchers agitate for work reforms the government was already preparing to grant, and which were granted a few hours later.

But the people didn't realize it was a phony demonstration. They took it up in earnest. Thousands besieged the government offices Wednesday. East German Communist police, trained and equipped like a army, didn't act like one. It took Russian tanks and machine-gunning armored cars to rout the crowd.

Meantime, rioting had spread like wildfire into the Eastern zone. The Germans were telling the world that no matter how much Russia claimed to represent its workers, it wasn't true of them. "We Want Freedom," and "Free Elections for a Unified Germany." Those were the slogans.

Already a few days before, the rapping on the Iron Curtain had been heard from Czechoslovakia, where similar work and economic conditions also had produced riots. Faint and not clearly identifiable noises came from Bulgaria.

Something had happened to the iron grip which the Stalin regime had held on the satellites.

Faint symptoms of the illness which Western diplomats had long expected of the weakness which is one day to topple the Communist empire, were beginning to appear, and with it the threat of extreme violence.

For an upheaval in Europe, any widespread revolt which might occur, will very definitely contain the makings of World War III. Either the Russian regime, in such an event, would go down to ignominious defeat, overwhelmed by people enraged by disillusionment, or Russian troops would have to be used for pacification.

In the complex world of today, that could not occur without producing general war. It would mean direct military conquest, against which the world turned its face forever when it intervened in Korea.

There is no indication that anything like this is likely to occur for the time being. What we have seen in the last few days is only the first rattling of the chains.

But once the slave defies the master, it becomes a catching thing.

Try Youth Today In Assault Case

A 19-year-old youth is scheduled for trial at 7:30 a. m. Thursday in Municipal Court on multiple charges, including a charge of attempted assault on a nine-year-old girl, police said.

Detectives J. E. Helms and E. F. McKillop said the youth, listed as Charles Sullivan, of 1965 Marietta Rd., N. W., has been convicted on 29 previous disorderly conduct charges and escaped from the city prison farm on two occasions.

Clark's Brookes For Harris Sketch

Dr. Stella Brewer Brookes, professor of English at Clark College here, will write the article on Joel Chandler Harris for the forthcoming edition of Encyclopedia Britannica.

Dr. Brookes is the author of a volume, "Joel Chandler Harris, Folklorist," published by the University of Georgia Press in 1950.

A Rhyme a Day

"Travel light on your summer vacation. You will be surprised to find you can do nicely with about one half of the articles usually taken for the trip."—Newspaper "advice" column.

When I was young I could afford . . . but little for my bed and board . . . a thing I frequently deplored . . . and felt it was unfair . . . the hall-bedroom to which I crept . . . had nothing much in it except . . . the narrow bed on which I slept . . . a washstand and a chair.

But when I moved, I packed my grip . . . with my few things and took a ship . . . or railroad train on some long trip . . . as far away as Greece is . . . but now I do not like to go . . . away from home because I know . . . my wife will pack four trunks or so . . . and six or eight valises.

I tell her that it isn't right . . . and that she ought to travel light . . . but if she only spends the night . . . she takes a dozen dresses . . . so I've quit trying, for the sake . . . of peace, but hope I'll get a break . . . and, maybe, sometimes she won't take . . . most all that she possesses.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VANDELLEN

Tension Is Linked To Pain-in-Neck

Lumbago, stiff neck, and other forms of muscular rheumatism usually are associated with physical strain, infection, or exposure to a draft. To these causes, nervousness has been added.

Lumbago and pain and stiffness in the neck and between the shoulder blades often are called fibrositis because it is believed that the fibrous tissues surrounding the muscles are affected. The area is tender to the touch and appears to be stiff because movements of the head or back aggravate distress. Soreness may develop so gradually that a week passes before it reaches its maximum pitch. In others, the onset is sudden; the individual awakens in the morning unable to get out of bed without help because of excruciating pain.

In other instances, pain comes and goes and has no effect upon health. There is a dull ache which, like rheumatism, is worse after rest and better following activity.

There is no question about the cause when lumbago follows injury or on awakening with a stiff neck after sleeping in a draft.

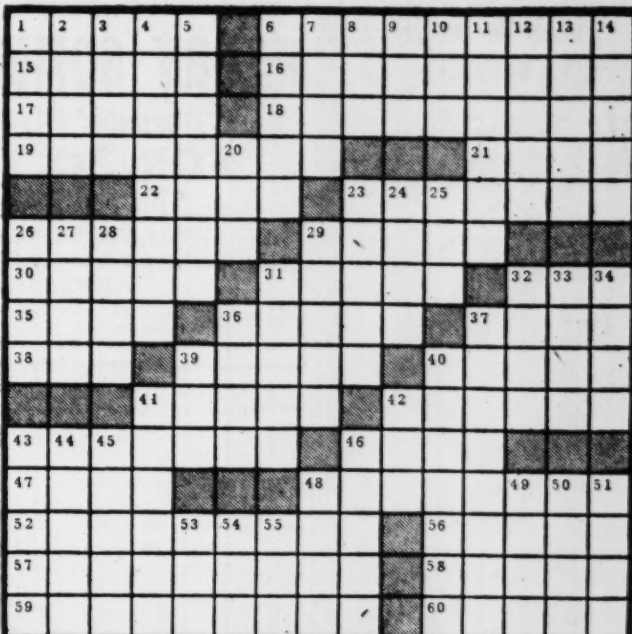

By using a special electric machine in which needles are inserted directly into the muscles (electromyograph), the phenomenon is easy to demonstrate.

Doctors T. H. Holmes and H. G. Wolff, for example, did experiments along this line by Inserting needles into various muscles and recording the response of the subjects to hostility or during other emotional upheavals.

During these intervals the machine showed the muscles to be in a state of tension. Shortly thereafter, when the patients were reassured that nothing was wrong, there was evidence of tissue relaxation.

The bidding:

South West North East

1 spade 2 hearts 3 clubs 3 hearts

3 spades Pass 4 clubs Pass

4 spades Pass 5 spades Pass

Opening lead: Ace of hearts.

A neat defensive coup was executed by Howard Schenken, West in today's hand, to defeat a game contract in spades. A war scarred veteran, Schenken has for almost a quarter of a century ranked among the top experts of the world.

South's free rebid of three spades is without endorsement.

Having opened on somewhat shaded values, it behooved him to pass the three heart bid to designate a hand of minimum nature. North could no doubt have rebid his clubs, and the same final contract would be reached. Under the circumstances, North exercised considerable restraint to stay out of a slam.

After cashing the ace of hearts, West concluded that the contract could not be defeated unless the defense contrived to win a trick in diamonds in addition to the heart and two spades. There was the hope that partner held the queen of diamonds, but one thing was certain: The defense could not profitably play the waiting game, with dummy's solid club suit staring them in the face. Accordingly, Schenken, in an effort to prevent the run of the clubs, led the king of diamonds.

This trick was won in dummy, as East followed with the deuce, and two top spades were cashed. A third one was led in the hope that the suit would break. When Schenken cashed the jack of spades he saw the futility of cashing the top trump and also was aware of the hopefulness of a further attack in diamonds, since East's discouraging card in diamonds marked declarer with the queen. A lock-in play against dummy was the one hope; so he exited with the ten of clubs. This made it awkward for declarer to return to his hand to drive out the last trump. If he played to his queen of diamonds, West could cash the jack of diamonds when he got in with his trump. If declarer chose to continue clubs, West would refuse to ruff the second round but would wait till the third round of the suit, after which he would get out with a heart, and declarer, unable to reach dummy any more, would be compelled to give up a diamond at the end.

Declarer foresaw all this and decided that his best chance was to find East with the jack of diamonds. He therefore led to his nine, but Schenken's jack sent the contract down to defeat.

Quarter Mill '53 Tax Set By Governor

Governor Talmadge issued an executive order fixing the state property tax rate for 1953 at one-fourth of one mill on all property except the shares of national and state banks which will be taxed at five mills.

The order is in keeping with a constitutional amendment ratified by the voters last fall to virtually abolish the state ad valorem tax by reducing it from five mills to one-fourth of one mill.

The amendment provided, however, that the reduction in the state property tax would not apply to banks, which are exempted from payment of the state three per cent sales and use tax.

Federal law provides that national banks may be taxed by states by only one of four methods. Revenue Commissioner Charles D. Redwine explained. Georgia taxes such banks on the value of their stock shares and therefore cannot apply the sales tax to banks. This was taken into consideration when the property tax amendment was drafted.

Redwine and Harvey Atkinson, property tax expert in the State Department of Revenue, said Georgia, for the first time in history, now is fixing by law two separate property tax rates — one for banks and another for all other property owners.

Court Rules Wife May Sue for Loss Of Love in Injury

A precedent-breaking ruling Wednesday by the Georgia Court of Appeals gave Georgia women the right to sue for loss of their husbands' love and affection as the result of injury.

The suit originated in Walker County Superior Court, where Mrs. Emma Brown entered suit against Georgia-Tennessee Coaches, Inc., for loss of consortium with her husband as the result of injury, which the suit said he sustained May 14, 1951, on a Georgia-Tennessee bus. The case was dismissed by the county court in November, 1952.

Loss of consortium, defined as "love, affection, companionship and sexual relationship," has never been a ground for suit in Georgia until today's ruling.
